Acalotti Guilty of Threatening Witness

Bail Refused, Newsdealer Jailed Until Sentencing

Self-Styled Mayor Of Thomas Circle May Get 3 Years In Franklin Case

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Newsdealer Attilio (Till) Acalotti, 42, indicted gambler and self-styled mayor of Thomas Circle, yesterday was convicted of threatening a Government witness and immediately jailed.

Judge Holtzoff said he will sentence Acalotti Friday.

Acalotti of 908 14th st. nw. faces a maximum penalty on the obstruction of justice charge of three years in jail, or a $200 fine, or both.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff refused to release Acalotti on bond, after he and defense counsel Charles E. Ford clashed briefly but bitterly on the conduct of the four-day case.

Jury Out Less Than Hour

A District Court jury of six men and six women took less than an hour to find him guilty of threatening on March 4 to "smash in" the face of Bernice Franklin, of 1750 16th st. nw. once his girl friend, later a star Government witness against him and others before the special gambling grand jury.

The jurors found Acalotti, alias Till Alcott, innocent of threatening to "shut her mouth permanently" on March 25.

Acalotti was accused of threatening the glamorous red-haired former waitress, at a time when she was testifying before the special gambling grand jury and the United States Commissioner.

As a result of her testimony, the gambling grand jury named Acalotti in three indictments, charging operation of a numbers lottery and setting up a gaming table. He will be tried on these charges in January.

"A Grave Offense"

In his charge to the jury yesterday, Judge Holtzoff said that threatening a witness was "a grave offense." He told the jurors Miss Franklin's testimony about the March 4 threat had been "corroborated" by two other Government witnesses.

The jury foreman, Marion A. Dyer, 44, 2921 Pennsylvania ave. se., brought in the verdict at 11:55 a. m., 50 minutes after the jurors commenced deliberations.

Judge Holtzoff ordered the defendant committed pending a presentence investigation by the probation office.

Ford rose in objection, asking

Mother's Sob Wins Yule Reprieve of Convicted Man

When Edward G. Sullivan, 39, of 1600 B st. se., was convicted yesterday in District Court of illegal possession of heroin, a woman began sobbing in the back of the room.

Judge Matthew F. McGuire bade her come forward, and amid her tears she said that she was Mrs. Janie S. Turner, the defendant's mother.

"Please, your honor," she said, "let him stay with me until Christmas. He's not a bad boy."

Judge McGuire hesitated, then pointed to Sullivan and said, "I'm not doing this for you. You broke your mother's heart a long time ago."

He released Sullivan under $1000 bond, indicating sentencing would wait until after Christmas.

Grand Jury Witnesses Called For John Maragon Inquiry

NYHT News Service

Evidence of alleged perjury will be presented next Tuesday to a Federal grand jury in the case of John Maragon, friend of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan and a key figure in last summer's 5 percent investigation.

Witnesses who testified about Maragon's activities as a man-about-Washington before the Senate investigations subcommittee were served subpenas yesterday to repeat their stories before the grand jury on December 20.

Maragon appeared before the subcommittee at a public hearing on August 26, but refused to answer most of its questions on grounds of possibly self-incrimination. He declined to discuss his relations with General Vaughan, the President's military aide, on the same grounds.

The subcommittee referred Maragon's case to the Department of Justice on the basis of alleged discrepancies between the story of his activities he told earlier in ex-

Brannan Plan to Be Fought

Kline Sees End of Liberty In U. S.-Guaranteed Profits

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP).—Allan B. Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said today a Government guarantee of high and profitable agricultural prices at all times "is the beginning of the end of personal liberty for our farmers."

"Farm Bureau policy with regard to price support legislation has been firmly based on belief in individual initiative and rewards based on work done, or service rendered," Kline said. "We call it free enterprise. What we mean, of course, is the American way of regulated free enterprise, as we know it."

Kline, in his speech prepared for delivery to delegates at the federation's thirty-first convention, renewed his attack on the Brannan farm plan. Kline and other federation leaders have expressed bitter opposition to the farm plan proposed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Secretary Brannan was not invited to address the federation's convention and his appeal for a "fair and constructive" hearing of

Alexandria Nonpartisan Voting Asked

Nonpartisan elections, strict definition of council and city manager functions, and a new financial setup are provided in a revised draft of the city charter submitted to the Alexandria City Council last night by Stanley King, chairman of the Charter Revision Commission.

Reflecting the result of a referendum in the general election last November 8, the report declared that partisan balloting has no place in municipal affairs. Partisan election of city officials was called unnecessary. It leads "virtually to the disenfranchising of persons who are not Democrats," the report said.

In revamping the financial structure of the city government the charter commission would institute a department of finance, and

London's Lights Go Dim as Power Walkout Spreads

London, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—London tonight was plunged into a partial blackout, reminiscent of wartime, as wildcat strikes of power plant workers spread and the government imposed drastic electricity cuts.

Several suburban areas had a complete blackout for several hours. Factories were closed. Homes were dark and many had no heat.

St. Albans, 40 miles north of London, and Guildford, to the south, had two-hour blackouts.

Cuts in the London area, which only a few months ago regained its prewar brightness, were as much as 20 percent.

An Electricity Authority spokesman said that "in certain areas, there will be a complete blackout." A few minutes later the electricity went off in nearby Romfort, Ilford, Dulwich and Dagenham.

The reductions were ordered as the power workers' strike, started yesterday in London suburban plants, spread to the Barking Station, Europe's largest generating plant.

Hoffman Warns Our Costs Double If Europe Goes Red

Cleveland, Dec. 13 (AP).—Paul G. Hoffman expressed the belief today that United States costs would reach 30 billion dollars annually if western Europe should go Communist. Such costs now are about 15 billion dollars.

The head of ECA said communism's plans for westward conquests can be blocked permanently by strengthening the free nations of Europe.

War might be avoided, Hoffman said, even if western Europe should come under control of the Kremlin "but the best we could hope for would be an uneasy and jittery peace."

He called for continued American aid to Marshall Plan countries, indicating the position ECA will take in asking Congress for additional billions to finance the program in the fiscal year starting next July 1.

If defense costs went up to 25 or 30 billions, he said, such stringent controls would be necessary to avoid economic disaster that "the United States would unavoidably become a garrison state."

Strand, Noted British Magazine, to Suspend

London, Dec. 13 (AP).—The Strand, one of Britain's most famous magazines, is going out of business with its March issue.

The publishers said today the magazine, founded in 1891, cannot meet rising postwar costs, despite a circulation of over 100,000 and "substantial advertising revenue."

U. S. Will Recognize Arias As Panar 's President Today

The United States today will recognize the 19-day-old regime of President Arnulfo Arias in Panama.

Action by this country is expected to be followed by similar steps by the remaining American republics. A dispatch from Panama yesterday said Foreign Minister Carlos N. Brinn had received formal recognition letters from the Peruvian and Nicaraguan Ambassadors, the Ministers of the Dominican Republic and Haiti, and the charge d'Affairs from Honduras.

Arias was proclaimed President of Panama on November 24 by Col. Jose Antonio Remon, commander of Panama's national police force (Army) after several days of post-election disorders.

Dr. Daniel F. Chanis had been forced to resign from the presidency and Roberta Chiari was installed as chief executive.

However, the Panama Supreme Court ruled that Chanis was entitled to the office. The Army's proclaiming of Arias as President followed.

Arias had contended, and was supported by the Army, that he was rightfully elected President in 1948, when the office was given to the late Domingo Diaz. Col. Remon, in installing Arias as President, said a recheck of the 1948 balloting showed Arias received 74,080 votes to 71,536 for Diaz.

Meanwhile, a Panama City United Press dispatch yesterday

Motor Failed, DC-3 Crew Member Says

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

The only living crew member of the crashed Capital Airlines DC-3 yesterday said the plane spun into the Potomac River from 300 feet after its right engine failed.

The latest clew to the cause of the Monday night crash in which four died and 19 survived was added by Flight Attendant Joseph W. Buell, jr., a former George Washington University football star, who was sitting in a rear seat at the time of the crash.

"We started a climb to the left at about 300 feet high," Buell said, his face bruised and eyes thickly bloodshot. "The starboard engine sputtered—I think it quit completely—then we spun off to the left."

"The plane had no power—it seemed to shudder or stall and go out of control," Buell added.

Navy Crews at Work

The twin-engine plane, which was carrying 20 passengers and a crew of three, dug its nose and left wing into Potomac River mud about a half-mile southeast of National Airport as it was coming in for an instrument landing.

Aircraft "stall out" and go out of control when their speed drops below a certain minimum. Engine failure during a climb or turn makes a plane especially vulnerable to stalls since extra power is needed to maintain flying speed in those attitudes.

Navy salvage crews went to work yesterday to extricate the hulk from the shallow water for Civil Aeronautics Board crash investigators.

Dead were Pilot William J. Davis, 45, of 209 Belle View blvd., Alexandria; Copilot Lloyd L. Porter, 28, of 109 Farmington dr., Alexandria; Mrs. William Chertow, Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Neville Lassiter, 2310 S. Columbus st., Arlington.

Of the 19 survivors, one was in critical condition, two were serious, four were fair, and 12 were in good condition.

Used Instrument Landing

In the heavy fog and drizzle, the plane had been using its instrument landing system to guide itself to the runway and had drifted off 1500 feet to the right of its path.

Reconstructing the accident, Government sources yesterday surmised that when the plane broke out of a cloud layer at 400 feet, the pilot realized he was far off course and started to climb in an attempt to circle the field for another approach.

Civil Aeronautics Administration gave the following history of the flight which had originated in Memphis, Tenn., and taken off from Norfolk at 6:43 p. m.

The airliner was told to remain five to eight minutes over Richmond by National Airport which was taking traffic from weathered-in New York airports.

Ben Stern, CAA information chief, said there were never more than 13 planes in the nearby stacks at one time, although other air-

Israel Moving Parliament To Jerusalem

Tel Aviv, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—The Israeli government proclaimed Jerusalem its capital city today in defiance of the United Nations decision to internationalize the city, and Parliament voted to hold its next session there.

"For the state of Israel there always has been and always will be one capital—Jerusalem, the eternal," Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion said in making the proclamation before Parliament.

"So it was for the past 3000 years and so it will be, we believe, until the end of time."

Parliament will meet in Jerusalem, as the result of the decision, after Channukah—"The Feast of Lights"—this weekend.

The capital will be set up in the Jewish-held "new" part of the city. Most of the Christian holy places are in the Old City, held by the Hashemite Jordan Arab Legion.

The cabinet voted on its move at an all-night session, ending at dawn this morning, after 48 hours of hot debate in the cabinet itself, in parliamentary circles and in political party caucuses.

The Parliament session which followed the cabinet meeting was tense.

Ben-Gurion said Israel always considered Jerusalem its real capital and that the setting up of government offices in Tel Aviv had been merely temporary. Assailing the United Nations decision, Ben-Gurion said:

"We cannot lend ourselves to take part in enforced separation from Jerusalem, violating without reason or need the historic natural right of the people of Zion.

"The required arrangements in Jerusalem now verge on completion. There is nothing to prevent the Knesset (parliament) from returning to Jerusalem."

Parliament voted unanimously to move to Jerusalem at once.

Actually, the Israeli government has been transferring offices to the new part of Jerusalem for months. The Ministries of Education, Agriculture and Health likewise are situated there now. Parliament held a session there last February.

Diplomats Disturbed By Israel's Decision

Lake Success, Dec. 13 (AP).—Some United Nations diplomats predicted today Israel's decision to move government offices and Parliament to Jerusalem may wreck the General Assembly's plan to put the Holy City under international rule.

These quarters also speculated it might be necessary to have a special spring session of the Assembly to try to untangle the consequences of the 1949 Assembly's overwhelming vote to impose a U. N. regime on Jerusalem.

The city now is occupied in separate parts by forces of Israel and Hashemite Jordan. Both are resisting the U. N. decision.

Nevertheless, the 12-nation Trusteeship Council started the complicated job of trying to carry out the Assembly decision.

Zoning Laws Thrown Out

City Loses 400 Housing Units Because of Racial Restriction

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 13 (AP).—This city's bid for 400 public housing units has been rejected because of a clause in the city council resolution which would have restricted occupancy of the project to Negro families.

The action, announced today, was seen as the first local demonstration of Federal policy under President Truman's declared intention to prevent racial discrimination in the use of public housing funds.

Announcing the turndown, Executive Secretary Harold J. Dillehay of the Charlotte Housing Authority said it will be necessary to revise the local application, and eliminate any reference to white or Negro occupancy, if clearance of the local project is to be obtained.

Dillehay released his statement after talking by telephone with officials of the Public Housing Administration in Washington.

The Charlotte project was stricken from the revised list approved by President Truman, he reported.

Reason for the rejection, PHA officials said, was the stipulation that the 400 units would be open only to Negro tenants.

[PHA officials in Washington said their decision in the Charlotte case has "no connection whatsoever" with the recent announcement by the Federal Housing Administration of a ban against restrictive covenants.

[PHA said the Charlotte application was turned down as contrary to this PHA policy: that its funds are to be allotted for housing of racial groups on the basis of need and population within the low-income status.

[Because, PHA explained, the application would have concentrated on the need for Negroes alone—ignoring needs of other groups—it did not follow this policy.

[PHA reiterated its stand that segregation is a matter for local option.]

Sale Ignoring Race Ban Held Suit Basis

Jefferson City, Mo., Dec. 13 (AP). Property owners who sell to Negroes in a racially restricted area may be sued for breach of contract, the Missouri Supreme Court decided yesterday.

Last year the United States Supreme Court held that real estate agreements not to sell or lease property to persons of a particular race are not enforceable in courts.

The Missouri court held yesterday that the federal decision did not go into another angle—whether one party to the original restriction could be sued for breach of contract.

The opinion stated:

"According to the law as we understand it the trial court may hear and determine an action for damages for the breach of the restriction agreement . . . without violating any provision of the federal or State constitutions. We are of the opinion that an action for damages for the breach of a valid agreement need not be affected by the Fourteenth Amendment.

Temple U. Head Asks Hoover Reforms; Citation Is Awarded To Defense Secretary

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The people of the United States can save themselves billions a year in the cost of Government if they demand the reforms suggested by the Hoover Commission, Dr. Robert L. Johnson said yesterday.

Johnson, president of Temple University and chairman of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover report was the last speaker at a two-day meeting of delegates from 35 States to plan how recommendations of the Hoover Commission on a streamlined Government can be put into effect.

"There is no doubt about it," Johnson said. "If the people demand these reforms that can save them billions a year in the cost of Government, and guarantee our survival as a free people, setting an example of the benefits of freedom to the world, they will become law.

"After all, the people in a true democracy are the Government."

Tribute to Hoover

At a luncheon earlier in the day Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson paid tribute to former President Herbert Hoover and the Commission for saving millions of taxpayers' dollars.

The Defense Secretary was awarded the group's first citation of merit for achievements in Government economy and efficiency.

In a speech Monday night Mr. Hoover said the reforms that Johnson has instituted will save the taxpayers at least one billion, and Johnson believes it may save two billion a year without impairing national defense.

Johnson and Budget Director Frank Pace, jr., who shared the platform with him at the luncheon gathering at the Shoreham Hotel, implied that additional savings and greater efficiency are in the making.

Staff Analyses Made

Pace, who has just returned from budget talks with President Truman at his Key West, Fla., vacation headquarters, said the Administration has made a staff analyses of all the 19 major recommendations of the Hoover Commission.

"The coming year, therefore, should see the completion of much of the basic work arising from the commission's recommendations," he said.

Pace stressed that the size of

Ramadier Warns Socialists Not To Leave Cabinet

Paris, Dec. 13 (NYHT).—Former Premier Paul Ramadier, addressing a Socialist convention called to decide whether the party should continue to support the present government, warned today that a Socialist withdrawal would open the way for communism or Gaullism.

"Support (of Premier Bidault's coalition cabinet) is our obligation," said Ramadier.

Andre Philip, a former Socialist minister, took exception asking the party to withdraw and accept the consequent risk of new general elections (the last were held in 1946) without fear of communism or Gaullism.

Leon Boutbien, another Socialist leader, said "it's necessary to stop collusion with a government in which there is no place for socialism."

The special convention is to close Wednesday. Most observers thought the convention would outline minimum conditions for continuing support of the government.

New Treasury Robot Figures Income Tax in 1-70 of Second

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Worried over computing your Federal income tax? Stop fretting. Uncle Sam has a new robot that can do it in the super-speed time of only one-seventieth of a second.

The official name of the machine is the electronic calculator. At Internal Revenue, employes refer to it as the "Big Brain."

The one machine is being installed in the Cleveland office of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Twelve others are on order from the International Business Machine Corp., and they will be placed other offices.

The existence of the fantastic robot was revealed yesterday by A. L. M. Wiggins, former Treasury Undersecretary, in a speech before the National Reorganization Conference at the Shoreham on the Hoover report.

A railroad executive who is now an unpaid management consultant to the Treasury Department, Wiggins told how "spectacular results" are being obtained through the mechanization of the operations in offices of the collectors of internal revenue. He then said.

"The most spectacular of these machines is an electronic calculator that will be employed in computing income tax. This machine will accept from a punch card basic tax

PUC Auditor Backs 8.75% Phone Boost

13 Pct. Request Of C&P Is Termed Million Too High

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

An increase in local telephone rates to realize $2,227,034 more in gross revenues was recommended yesterday by V. A. McElfresh, chief accountant and auditor for the District Public Utilities Commission.

This recommendation was a million dollars less than the amount requested by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

After testifying in a hearing before the PUC, McElfresh told a reporter approval of his suggestion would mean an 8.75 percent rate increase, rather than the 13 percent asked by the company.

However, John J. Kirby, General Services Administration attorney, disclosed the Federal Government will recommend an even smaller amount be granted the telephone company when the hearing resumes today at 10 a. m.

McElfresh differed with company testimony on two principal points:

1. He testified the present rate of return on intra-District operations is 4.17 percent, rather than the 3.76 percent computed by the company.

The PUC official said this difference arose principally from failure of the firm to receive credit for its share of income tax refunds made to the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which owns C. & P. completely, and is-

Kin of Joe Adonis Held in $1,000,000 Travel Check Case

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—Two men were held in high bail today on charges they were involved in a ring accused of producing one million dollars in counterfeit American Express Co. travelers' checks.

One man, booked as George Gillette, 39, of Brooklyn, was said by FBI agents to be the head of the ring. He was described as a brother-in-law of Joe Adonis, reputed New York underworld figure.

Bail for Gillette was fixed at $75,000 for a hearing December 20.

The second man aarrested was Thomas Martin Poli, 40, New York.

United States Attorney Irving Saypol said $140,000 in counterfeit travelers' checks were cashed by the ring's agents last summer.

Two other men, Nicholas Frasca and Philip Schwartz, operators of a lithograph company allegedly organized by Gillette, have pleaded guilty to counterfeiting charges.

U. S. Merger Of Transport Offices Urged By Sawyer

Promotion Agencies Would Be Combined; Review of Subsidies Issue Recommended

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer yesterday turned in to the White House a report that pictured Government regulation and development activities in the field of transportation as a jungle of contradictions.

The agencies charged with promoting rail, motor, ship and airplane transportation are operating at cross purposes, one of them undermining or countering the work of another, the report said.

The transportation regulatory agencies—the Interstate Commerce Commission, Maritime Commission and Civil Aeronautics Board—were found to be too often setting rates that bear no relation to sound economics or the consumer's interest.

Nullify Each Other

Finally, according to the report, the two categories of Federal agencies—regulatory and promotional—often operated in such a way as to nullify each other's work.

The unhappy portrait was prepared by Secretary Sawyer in response to a request from President Truman to work up an outline "of the major policy issues which need to be resolved" as a basis for determining "a unified and coordinated Federal program for transportation."

Sawyer's reply indicated that existing policy in the area of transportation was neither unified nor coordinated.

One of the remedies he proposed, therefore, was the consolidation into a single agency of all the Federal activities to promote and develop transportation such as the Bureau of Public Roads, that of the Army Engineers on rivers and harbors, the Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic survey and Civil Aeronautics Administration, and the granting of subsidies by the Maritime Commission.

Cabinet Status Once Asked

Sawyer did not say whether it should be a separate organization or whether it should be in his own department.

The Hoover Commission on Government Reorganization recommended the latter. The directors of the Hoover Commission's task force on transportation, however, independently called for the creation of a Cabinet-

Coplon Judge Says U.S. Case Is 'Tainted'

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—An FBI inspector testified today G-men tapped telephones in Judith Coplon's Washington home, in her office and in the Brooklyn home of her parents.

But the prosecution said none of the evidence in the spy conspiracy case against Miss Coplon and Valentin A. Gubitchev stems from wire-tapping.

The testimony was given before Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan, who must rule on a defense motion to throw the case out of court on the ground that it is based on "illegal" wire-tapping.

"The Government concedes that the wires were tapped," Ryan commented, "and that evidence was illegally obtained. We know the Government's case is tainted, but what we seek to ascertain is what portion of the Government's case is tainted."

FBI Inspector Howard B. Fletcher testified the recordings later were destroyed.

Miss Coplon and Gubitchev are charged with conspiring to steal Government secrets for the benefit of the Russians. Their trial is set for December 27.

New York, Dec. 13 (NYHT).—A succesion of character witnesses, headed by John W. Davis, 1924 candidate for President on the Democratic ticket, testified today that Alger Hiss had an excellent reputation for loyalty, integrity, and veracity.

This testimony followed the disclosure by Stanley K. Hornbeck, once Hiss' superior in the State Department, that on one occasion since 1947 Hiss was referred to as a Communist by William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France.

Hornbeck said his only reaction was to shrug his shoulders.

Yesterday, Hornbeck had related that Bullitt told him some time after 1939 that he had heard in Paris that Hiss was a fellow traveler. Today, as assistant United States Attorney Thomas F. Murphy continued cross-examining him, Hornbeck said that at the time he asked Hiss if there was any foundation whatever for this story, and Hiss said there was not.

Davis, now head of the law firm of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Sunderland & Kiendl, and formerly Ambassador to the Court of St. James' and United States Solicitor General, testified that he helped nominate Hiss for the presidency of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Davis said he was one of a committee of three directors of the endowment that investigated the qualificatons of Hiss and other candidates for the post.

Hiss is on trial for the second time on an indictment alleging that he committed perjury when he denied that he gave secret Government documents to Whittaker Chambers for transmission to a Communist spy ring in 1938. The first trial ended in a hung jury July 8.

Another character witness today was Gerard Swope, jr., counsel for the International General Electric Co., who said he had known Hiss off and on since 1932 and his reputation was excellent. Clarence R. Pickett, executive secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, said Hiss' reputation was "of the very highest caliber."

The testimony given at the first trial by Charles F. Darlington, former assistant chief of the trade agreements section of the State Department, was read to the jury today. In it Darlington said Hiss' reputation was the "finest any one could have." He also testified that Hiss' reputation was "of the very highest caliber."

Ex-Red Says He Once Voted For Bridges

San Francisco, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—A Negro former Communist said today Harry Bridges was a member of the high policy-making national committee of the Communist Party in 1936.

"At the 1938 national convention of the Communist Party at the Central Hotel (New York) I voted to reelect Bridges to the national committee," Johnson said.

Amerika Editor Deplores D. C. Ban on Soviet Journal

By Gershon Fishbein
Post Reporter

Banning the Soviet Information Bulletin in District school libraries will play into the hands of Russian propagandists, according to Donald Bowers, who returned three weeks ago from Moscow, where he served as editor of Amerika magazine.

[Amerika is the Russian-language monthly magaine published by the State Department for sale and distribution in the Soviet Union. It contains numerous illustrations, is essentially nonpolitical in its content, which is rigidly censored by Russian authorities in Moscow.]

Besides, said Bowers, the action here and in other cities where the Russian magazine has been banned may only increase the difficulties of American authorities in getting the State Department's magazine distributed in the Soviet Union.

"I, for one, am sorry the whole thing came up," said Bowers when reached by telephone in New York, where he is now employed by the State Department on the United States end of Amerika.

"The Russians have been contending for years that everything is controlled by monopolists. We have had some success in ridding the Russian people of that notion, but now I'm afraid our job is going to be more difficult," he declared.

Asserting that the District action would be "candy" in the hands of Russian propagandists, Bowers predicted the Soviet leaders would seize on the incidents to inform the people that Americans were not given a full opportunity to "understand" the Russians.

Bowers said no parallel situation ever has arisen in Russia simply because it would be "unrealistic" to attempt to get Amerika into Soviet schools. Amerika, he explained, has a very small mailing list, the bulk of its 50,000 copies being sold monthly on newsstands in Moscow and Leningrad.

Amerika is sent to a small number of libraries in Russia, but Bowers admitted the American Embassy is uncertain whether they ever get them. At any rate, the magazine is not displayed on their shelves.

Russian school children, he added, are discouraged in every possible way from reading the magazine.

"A student once was detected reading Amerika in the classroom and was promptly scolded by the teacher. He said the boy shouldn't waste his time reading such propaganda, particularly in school, where they instill the Russian philosophy every minute of the day," Bowers recalled.

"Yet after school most of the students were crowding around the boy who had the copy. It was their first chance to see the magazine."

By contrast, said Bowers, American school children would never be attracted to the Russian magazine here. As obvious propaganda, the magazine would have little appeal for American students. They wouldn't bother to read it, he believes.

Bowers thus defended the New York City policy of allowing unhampered distribution of the Russian magazine as against the District action of confiscating copies.

The experience of Amerika in Moscow proves, he said, that where information is suppressed or limited, propaganda becomes far more effective.

Bowers cited an instance in which the Russian government put on an anti-American play, depicting the characters as typical American "monopolists." On leaving the theater, he heard a member of the audience say to her friend: "Those aren't real Americans at all. I've seen them in Amerika."

O'Conor Blasts Gdynia Line as 'Propagandist'

By the United Press

Chairman Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) of a Senate Judiciary subcommittee yesterday accused the Polish-owned Gdynia-America Shipping Line, Inc., of engaging in Communist propaganda activities among Americans of Polish descent.

He issued a report on the subcommittee's investiation of the company, on whose ship, the Batory, Communist Gerhart Eisler fled to Europe after jumping bond. The report said that neither the Polish Communist regime "nor certain employes of the line" are free of blame in the Eisler incident.

The Polish Embassy retorted that the report "is full of distortions and contains downright false accusations." The embassy said the subcommittee has made false charges on a number of occasions.

It added in a statement:

"The report . . . aims at poisoning the relations between the people of Poland and the people of the United States. This effort cannot and will not succeed. We trust in the open mindedness of the American people . . ."

O'Conor's report dealt specifically with a radio program broadcast by the company over stations in Brooklyn, Newark, N. J., and Chicago. It said the broadcast was begun in 1946 "at the demands of the Polish consular and diplomatic representatives in this country" and not by the firm's officials.

O'Conor said the program "ostensibly" serves as a business advertising medium, but in reality is intended to "afford the Communist dictatorship of Poland an effective propaganda medium in the United States by which to influence Polish-American citizens and bring pressure directly or indirectly upon the Government of the United States."

He said that, although the words "Communist" and "communism" never are mentioned in the program's scripts, the broadcasts portray Poland under the Communist regime as a land of milk and honey where government officials constantly strive for world peace.

Wife Asks Divorce; 30-Year Hunt for Perfection Palls

Miami, Fla., Dec. 13 (AP).—After nearly 30 years of trying to attain what she termed "perfection," Mrs. Abigail H. Villaret today sued her Army officer husband, Col. Eugene Villaret, of 4226 36th st. nw., Washington, D. C., for a divorce.

Charging extreme cruelty, Mrs. Villaret said her husband "exhibits toward her a cold and calculated appraisal such as he would direct toward any inanimate object," and completely subordinates her interests to his work or the attempt to attain his ideal of perfection.

She charges further that "his devotion to military duties was the nearest human approach to perfection, a commendable trait, but he applied these principles to her and to every phase of their married life."

They were married in Washington July 17, 1920. He is stationed there now.

Nonpartisan Voting Asked

abolish the present elective office of city collector.

The proposed charter would end any interference by the council with the city manager in the performance of his duties. Conceding the right of the council to hire and fire the city manager, the report says this should not give the council the authority to usurp his functions, nor to exercise direct authority over municipal employes.

"It has been frequently said that some of the city's administrative ills in the past have resulted from the concept of councilmen that they are assistant city managers," the report comments. "The city manager's authority must equal his responsibility."

This section has teeth in the form of a provision that any councilman who goes counter to it may suffer loss of his council seat.

Mayor Franklin P. Backus said that public hearings on the proposed charter will be held probably in January. Thereupon, the charter must be approved by the council. The aim is to send the charter to the Virginia General Assembly which meets January 10 for approval at this session.

Members of the charter revision committee, which has been working six months recasting the 17-year-old charter, are Edward S. Holland, jr., Charles M. Jones, Don K. Price, Thomas Moncure, W. Bruce Silcox and Edmund F. Ticer.

Included in the draft is a clause for putting a municipal tax on bills for gas, electricity and water. In his last budget request City Manager W. Guy Ancell suggested the city raise half a million dollars a year by imposition of a 10-percent levy on residents' payments for utilities.

The city manager would continue to prepare the budget, but there would be a department of finance to exercise general supervision. Independent of the department would be an auditor of municipal accounts, appointed by and reporting directly to the council.

Some of the major changes proposed in the new charter are:

1. The councilman with the most votes in an election would no longer become mayor. The mayor would be selected by ballot of the council.

2. The city attorney would be appointed by the council, not elected.

3. Greatly enlarged functions would be accorded the city planning commission, such as projecting long-range community developments and advising the council on proposed changes in zoning regulations.

4. The City Manager would be required to stablish a system of personnel classification and an equitable pay plan for all employes; also provide for on-the-job training and a permanent retirement program on an actuarial basis.

5. Control of subdivision development would be brought about by specifying in the charter the kind of improvements that would be required, should annexation of such areas take place in the future.

Brannan Takes Slap Back at Farm Group

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 13 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan tonight declared that agriculture is "caught in the jaws of an economic pincer." He pledged a continued Administration fight for improved farm programs.

In an obvious reference to the Farm Bureau Federation, which failed to invite him to speak at its Chicago convention, Brannan said some "appear unwilling to present all sides of the price support problem to those they assume to represent."

Brannan and Farm Bureau officials have had sharp differences over farm polices.

Predicts Income Slide

Describing the "economic pincher" gripping agriculture, Brannan said prices of farm products have been permitted to slide while farmers continue to pay near-record prices for things they must buy in order to produce. He predicted net income of farm operators may decline another 15 percent next year.

Brannan's remarks were in a speech prepared for the annual meeting of the Farmers Union Grain Terminal Association, a cooperative.

The Secretary promised efforts to correct what he termed "defects" in the farm bill passed by the last Congress.

The two "most outstanding defects in the act," he said, are that "it does not provide any effective and efficient method of supporting perishable commodities; nor does it provide a method of support which allows the benefits of abundant production, especially of meat, milk, fruits and vegetables, to reach consumers through normal channels of trade, or at prices which will encourage greater consumption."

Brannan's Plan

Under the Brannan plan, prices of perishable farm products would be allowed to seek their natural level. If those prices failed to give farmers a predetermined fair return, the Government would make up the difference in direct payments to farmers.

Brannan said it would be a mistake to refer to his farm plan as a complete solution to the farm problem. "All that I have suggested . . . is a means of improving the farm price support program," he said.

The Nation does not have great surpluses, Brannan said. In the matter of eggs, he said the 65 million pounds of dried eggs on hand are equivalent to less than a dozen and a half shell eggs per person in the United States.

Brannan added, however, that if the Nation continues to operate under "inadequate price programs," there will be a surplus problem, particularly if demand should sharply decline.

his proposal was rejected by Kline yesterday.

Indications were that the convention later in the week will propose strong opposition to the Brannan plan, which would let prices of perishable farm products seek their natural level. The Government would make up the difference, in direct payments to farmers, if those prices failed to give farmers a predetermined fair return.

Kline, comparing Farm Bureau price support policy with the 1949 Agricultural Act, said the legislation has "good points in it, although the level of supports is higher and more inflexible than the federation considers desirable."

He told the convention:

"The major provisions were worked out by the statesmanlike effort of some of the best authorities on agriculture in both parties. It will be a sorry day for agriculture and for America when a long-term, economically sound agricultural program must come second to strictly partisan politics. We firmly believe that agricultural policies should be decided on a basis far above that level of thinking."

He asserted there is an approach to farm problems being promoted currently which "is best described as full parity for farmers, cheap food for consumers, and it won't cost anybody much."

High price guarantees will not help the low income farmer, Kline said.

"Price guarantees can do little for farmers who need land, capital, machinery and many other things. They may get a higher price than before but, of course, they have to be content with less production. We must, of course, have controls to make such guaranteed prices effective. This leaves them about the same income or, at the very best, only a very little more . . .

"It is unnecessary in this country to stabilize and perpetuate poverty thus, and it is cruelly dishonest to hold out price guarantees to these farmers as an answer to their problem.

"We must and we can, working together, restore creative opportunity this way lies progress, prosperity, personal liberty.

"The basic essential to farm prosperity is high per capita production in the rest of the economy, as well as in agriculture."

French See Polish Trial In the Making

Paris, Dec. 13 (NYHT).—Foreign Minister Robert Schuman accused the Polish government today of arresting French citizens as one of the steps leading to "a spectacular trial similar to those which have taken place elsewhere since the war."

The French intend to see that Frenchmen so arrested will have the benefit of a "serious defense," carried on by French attorneys, he promised.

Schuman's words in the National Assembly were followed quickly by the news that Poland had taken retaliatory action for the expulsion by France Saturday of 18 Poles, most of them schoolteachers.

The Polish Information Service announced that 11 teachers at the French Institute in Warsaw had been ordered to leave Poland wihin 48 hours.

This brings the total of French citizens expelled from Poland in the last month to 20, the Foreign Ministry said. An additional 17 are under arrest in Poland. France has expelled 37 but is holding only one Pole, Joseph Szcerbinski, vice consul in Lille.

U. S. to Push A. & P. Action, Bergson Tells Senate Group

By The Associated Press

The Government intends to push its pending civil antitrust action against the Atlantic & Pacific grocery chain, the chief of the Justice Department's anti-trust division said yesterday.

Assistant Attorney General Herbert A. Bergson told a Senate Agriculture subcommittee the civil action is a follow-up to a criminal antitrust conviction in Illinois in which A. & P. "paid $175,000 maximum fine."

Bergson explained civil antitrust suits customarily are brought to halt the offending practices on which criminal prosecution is based.

Chairman Gillette (D., Iowa) promised cooperation of the Senate committee in enforcing the antitrust laws. The committee is investigating food prices.

Earlier Paul Hadlick, attorney for the Senate inquiry, asked Bergson if A. & P. had received thousands of dollars "nown as kickbacks" from dairy companies in the Chicago area. "We call them discriminatory rebates," Bergson replied.

Hadlick noted that an antitrust case in the eastern Illinois district charged that A. & P. received rebates from the Bowman Dairy Co., J. A. Bowman and others ranging from $25,000 to $98,000 from 1942 to 1948.

Hadlick asked if this might not explain why farmers got only 8 cents for the quart of milk which costs consumers "22 cents on the doorstep."

Bergson agreed, but pointed out that price-fixing agreements for farmer cooperatives, and through Federal marketing agreements, are exempt from antitrust prohibitions against price fixing.

Gillette announced the hearings will suspend tomorrow until the new Congress convenes. He said the subcommittee is still seeking data on A. & P. costs from President David T. Bofinger. Bofinger declined an invitation to testify December 5.

Young Experts On Vegetables Meeting Here

Business sessions will begin today at the Hotel Washington for the 15th annual convention of the National Junior Vegetable Growers Association.

Nearly 500 farm boys and girls from throughout the Nation are here for the meeting.

Beginning this morning, more than 40 teams, winners from over the Nation, will compete in demonstrating some practical phase of the production, marketing or use of fresh vegetables.

The best team in each of these three groups will compete in the finals Thursday. Two teams are entered from Maryland.

Morris Brown, jr., of Northeast, and Donald McGrady of Rising Sun will demonstrate preparation of vegetables for exhibition.

Clyde Warnick and Ed Orndorff, both of Rawlings, will demonstrate harvesting and storing of onions.

Other delegates registered from Maryland include Edward K. Bender, adult leader, from the Agriculture Extension Service, University of Maryland; George Ward, Cumberland; Joe Steger, Rising Sun; Whitney Conaway, Woodstock, and Douglas King, Clarksburg.

Virginia delegates include Darrell Large, Coeburn; Greenville Wright, jr., London Bridge, and R. D. Hubbard, Blacksburg.

The delegates spent Monday and Tuesday visiting points of interest here and made a tour of the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Eating Habits Change

London, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—Britons are eating 40 percent less meat than before the war, a government white paper said last night. The white paper said also that consumption of dairy products, potatoes and grain products has risen more than 25 percent.

Tobin Renews Plea To Lift Jobless Pay

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Labor Tobin yesterday renewed his plea for Congress to set up a national jobless insurance program that would assure larger benefits than those now paid by the States.

Tobin said the present unemployment compensation system is "far from adequa e" because it does not cover enough workers or provide sufficient help to those laid off.

"Despite increases in benefits in many States," he said, "these increases have not kept pace with wage increases."

He expressed these views in testimony to a Senate-House economic subcommittee that is studying various proposals for assisting people in the low-income group.

Urges 26-week minimum

The Labor Secretary told the lawmakers he thinks it is "desirable" for Congress to write Federal standards to require the States to pay increased minimum benefits for at least 26 weeks. He also advocated additional allowances for dependents of the jobless workers.

The various States now pay out the compensation that generally is financed by a special tax on employers. In a few States, the workers also contribute to the insurance program. About 33 million workers are covered, with benefits averaging about $20 a week.

Tobin previously had urged that the unemployment aid be set up on a uniform, Nation-wide basis, with minimum benefits of $25 weekly.

The Labor Secretary also urged a broad expansion of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors' Insurance system. He told the committee he also would like to see an approach made to a $100-a-month pension for workers covered by Social Security, and a gradual increase in the minimum wage to $1 an hour.

He viewed private industrial pension plans, such as recently negotiated by the CIO Steelworkers, as a supplement to, rather than a substitute for, what he called a "realistic" Government pension program.

Tobin said other ways Congress could help raise living standards of the low-income people would be to approve the Administration's Fair Deal program, particularly those sections dealing with health insurance and "limitations on civil liberties."

Another Administration witness touched off a brief committee dispute earlier when he also advocated action on those controversial points.

Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said the Government already is doing a great deal to help raise living standards. He said the best way Congress can lend further assistance is to make those programs more effective.

To this, Representative Rich (R., Pa.) retorted that the Administration is trying to "socialize America."

A tax expert told the subcommittee that high estate and inheritance taxes are slowly wiping out the Nation's small businesses.

Federal and State tax priorities, he said, are forcing estate liquidation and making it almost impossible for a business to pass from father to son.

This was the picture drawn by W. T. Hackett, vice president and trust officer of the Huntington National Bank of Columbus, Ohio.

"My experience leads me to believe,' 'he said, "that our present high estate and inheritance tax levies are slowly but surely destroying the small business."

Inheritance taxes pick off small businesses one by one, Hackett said, as those who inherit usually are forced to sell to get enough cash to pay up.

Baldwin's Resignation From Senate Submitted

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 13 (AP).—Raymond E. Baldwin formally resigned as Connecticut's junior United States Senator today in order to become an associate justice of the State Supreme Court.

Baldwin, a Republican, was given the judicial appointment by the Democratic chief executive last April. Last week Gov. Chester Bowles announced he had chosen William Benton, his former advertising partner, as Baldwin's successor. Benton has said he'll sit in the Senate as a Democrat.

Baldwin said today he would be sworn in as a member of the State's highest appellate court on Saturday at 11 a. m.

Truman Tax, Deficit Plans Withheld

Key West, Fla., Dec. 13 (AP).—The White House today said it will not disclose President Truman's recommendations on how to forestall another deficit next year until he delivers his state of the Union message to Congress in January.

Charles G. Ross, press secretary, declined to give the President's views on proposals to eliminate wartime excise taxes or on suggestions by some advisers that new levies be made on corporation profits.

Ross said the President has "pretty well in mind the broad outline" of his tax program.

Ross would not comment specifically on a radio assertion by Secretary of Commerce Sawyer suggesting consideration of removing excise taxes or criticism of Administration financial policies by Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, who quit as chairman of the Economic Advisory Council because of differences over policy.

Group Backs Rehearings on Gas Increase

Members of the Lamond Heights Citizens Association last night indorsed a resolution passed by the Federation of Citizens Associations petitioning for reopening of hearings on gas rate increases.

The association also asked for consideration by the traffic department of traffic hazards at New Hampshire and Eastern aves. ne.; learned a storm sewer would be constructed at the foot of Rittenhouse and 3d sts. ne., in response to its petition, and was told a request for a pedestrian underpass beneath the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Kansas ave. ne. was receiving consideration.

The 35 members met at the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, New Hampshire ave. and Peabody st. ne.

Mid-Way Association

The Baltimore Plan of housing development was discussed last night by more than 50 members of the Mid-Way Civic Association at meeting at the Morgan School, Florida ave. and California st. nw.

Representatives of the District Commissioners office joined officers to plan improvements of block 150 bounded by 17th, 18th, U and V sts. nw.

John W. Robinson was appointed to head a group to meet with a commissioners' committee to work out details of cleaning up and repairing substandard homes in that area.

Le Droit Park

The Le Droit Park Civic Association voted last night to honor Mrs. Mary T. Latmore, 325 T st. nw., a retired school teacher, at a banquet in March.

Mrs. Latmore had taught in District schools for 50 years.

At its meeting at the Mott School, 4th and W sts. nw., the group also voted to back the American Automobile Association's stand for courses on driving in District schools.

Strike Averted As Ship Contract Is Extended Again

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—Thirty-eight Atlantic and Gulf Coast shipping firms today extended to April 16 their contract with 2000 AFL ship's officers to wipe out a growing strike threat.

Federal Mediator William N. Margolis said the union and the shippers agreed to the four-months contract extension during a three and one-half hour meeting with him.

GOP Aide Demands End of 'Metooism'

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP).—The chairman of the Republican national strategy committee today called on the GOP to "divest itself of metooism."

Arthur E. Summerfield, of Michigan, said it is time to quit telling the voters that the Republicans don't disagree much with the Democrats and that the Republicans can do what the Democrats propose better than the Democrats.

He said the Republicans haven't given the people a clear choice or "any reason" to throw out the Democrats. The only exception, he said, was in the 1946 congressional elections, and then the Republicans won by "meeting the opposition head-on."

Summerfield, of Flint, Mich., urged the party's 23 member group to recommend that the Republicans; "go to the people with a program clearly and unmistakably in opposition to that now offered by our opponents."

No Formal Action Taken

The Michigan national committeeman later said the strategy committee was in "general agreement" with his remarks but that no formal action was taken on his views.

Guy Gabrielson, national GOP chairman, said he will name a policy committee by the first week in January. Its report and that of the strategy committee which met today will be submitted to the Republican National Committee by the end of February.

Gabrielson said the strategy group's sentiments solidified a feeling that "we should adopt a clear cut point of view, and that we didn't win in 1948 because we didn't put up a fight or start an argument." He also told newsmen:

"We are going to have an affirmative program. We may turn out to be a failure, but we are going to make a hell of a lot of noise in doing it."

Summerfield said the strategy committee adjourned until a later meeting some time after the holidays with full confidence that it will develop election techniques "in packaged form." The package, he said, will help party workers to success in regaining congressional control for the GOP in 1950. He did not divulge specific details.

The committee, called to discuss ways and means of a 1950 drive to regain control of Congress, also heard reports on a Wisconsin State organization plan to enlist GOP doorbell ringers, and on a New York public relations firm's survey of GOP election chances. The latter report said the situation "is far from hopeless."

In his address Summerfield said:

"I think we have hit bottom and are on our way back up. I sense a gradual return of optimism among the Republicans I meet."

He called for "fluid ideas and some concrete suggestions" on how to beat the Democrats and said:

"It seems crystal clear to me that the record of the party for the past 16 years demands that a brand new and fundamental conception of strategy be adopted.

Man Admits He's 'Shuttle Bandit', Police Report

William H. Ford, 29, of RFD 3, Rockville, Md., was under arrest yesterday and police said he admitted to being the "shuttle cab bandit."

Washington and Montgomery County police both had been seeking the man who:

Got in a cab in Silver Spring, Md., and was driven into the District where he robbed the driver of $4 and his cab.

Entered a second cab in the District and asked to be driven to Silver Spring, robbing the driver of $10 and his cab en route.

Ford, arrested on "information" Monday night at his home, was held in $2500 bond in Maryland on a robbery charge and his hearing was set for December 20 in Silver Spring Police Court.

T. Brooke Howard To Defend Conner In Child Killings

T. Brooke Howard, Alexandria criminal attorney, said yesterday he has been retained as counsel for John Steven Conner, 39, charged with the shotgun slayings of his three children.

Conner, a civilian engineer at Fort Belvoir and former honor student at the United States Military Academy, kille' the children December 7 as they prepared to leave home for school.

Howard said the defense would enter a plea of innocent by reason of insanity and ask for a jury trial or a trial before a commission.

The attorney said he was retained by Conner's wife, Mrs. Janet Conner, and father, Guy Conner, of Portland, Oreg.

Bell Quits as N. Y. Banks Head; Called Omen in Dewey's Future

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 13 (AP).—Elliott V. Bell, one of Governor Dewey's top political and economic advisers, resigned today as State Superintendent of Banks, effective December 31.

Bell, a member of Dewey's cabinet for seven years, will become chairman of the executive committee of McGraw-Hill Publishing Co., Inc., New York City, on Januarys.

Bell is the first top-ranking member of the Dewey "team" to leave State service.

His resignation touched off increased speculation as to whether Dewey would retire to private life at the end of his second term December 31, 1950.

Bell, 47, has been a close friend of Dewey and one of his most trusted advisers since 1939. He took part in Dewey's unsuccessful drive for the Republican nomination in 1940 and was a key figure in the Governor's presidential bids in 1944 and 1948.

Dulles Would Combat Reds Beyond Our Strategic Areas

New York, Dec. 13 (NYHT).—Former Senator John Foster Dulles called upon the American Government tonight to carry the global fight against communism beyond the areas which are of immediate "strategic and political concern" to the United States.

Dulles said the United States must not leave uncontradicted an impression that the "Soviet Communists may have a free hand" wherever American military defense is not directly imperiled. He referred to Formosa, the Chinese Nationalist stronghold off the coast of China.

"On December 1," Dulles said, "there was a highly responsible report from Washington that read:

"'The Joint Chiefs of Staff have decided that Formosa is not of vital strategic importance to the United States, and the State Department consequently is prepared to see the island lost to the Chinese Communists, it was learned today.'

"That, of course, was not official, and I hope it never will become official. The fact, however, that such a report has responsible sponsorship and has gained wide credence indicates how general is the feeling that strategic factors mark the limit of our official concern.

"We must make it clear to the tens of millions of restive subject peoples in eastern Europe and Asia that we do not accept the status quo of servitude that aggressive Soviet communism has imposed on them," he said. Their "eventual liberation is an enduring and essential part of our foreign policy."

Dulles called for a "moral counteroffensive," against which the "Soviet Union is particularly vulnerable." "The Communist political structure is overextended, overrigid and ill-founded. It can be shaken by a moral offensive such as we could launch," he added.

Negotiations Halt For Arvey Realty

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP).—Negotiations for property on three superhighway routes were halted today following disclosure that Jacob M. Arvey, Cook County Democratic chief, had bought property in the path of one highway's proposed right-of-way.

Arvey, contending the transactions were legitimate business deals, tonight said he has asked the Chicago Bar Association "to conduct a full inquiry" into one of his purchases.

Arvey said the Bar Association president had agreed to submit the proposal to the board of managers "for appropriate action."

Virgil E. Gunlock, superhighway commissioner, gave the order to halt land negotiations now in progress for three superhighways.

Arvey revealed today that he and two associates have financial interests in three parcels of property scheduled for condemnation.

Nothing Irregular, Arvey says

But, he insisted, there is nothing irregular in the real estate deals. Arvey was associated in the investments with Superior Judge Samuel Epstein, his former law partner, and Louis Mantynband, now a law business associate of the Democratic Cook County chairman.

A joint statement by the three men was issued after the Chicago Sun-Times yesterday revealed their interest in one of the parcels, a square block of 27 buildings astride the right-of-way of the proposed Congress st. superhighway.

The Arvey-Epstein-Mantynband group, together with two others, bought the property for about $900,000 after filing of a condemnation suit by Cook County in April, 1946. A jury awarded them compensation and damages of $1,206,452 for a swath through the block in September, 1948.

The statement today said that Arvey and Epstein went into real estate investment shortly after they became law partners in 1928, establishing a fund for financing their deals.

Two Parcels Bought in 1945

Mantynband joined the fund later, and the two other parcels involved in pending condemnation cases were purchased in 1945 while Arvey was an officer in the Army under the Judge Advocate General. All three purchases were made before Epstein became a judge.

The 1945 purchases were syndicate deals on two buildings on Market st., the statement said. It was not until three years after their urchase that an ordinance was passed designating these properties as in the path of a proposed extension and widening of the street to connect Wacker dr. and the proposed Congress st. superhighway.

The Arvey-Epstein-Mantynband group has a 25 percent interest in the other. Gunlock today submitted a report on financial deals involving properties the city plans to acquire for approaches to the superhighway.

Jury Will Sift Maragon Story

ecutive sessions and the testimony of other witnesses.

Members of the subcommittee charged in the course of the hearings that these discrepancies constituted "a clear-cut case of perjury" by Maragon on several counts. They cited the following possible counts:

1. Maragon, in secret testimony later read at the public hearings, repeatedly denied that he had ever represented any clients before Government agencies or had been paid for such services. Both businessmen and Government officials testified that he had interceded with such agencies on a number of occasions, sometimes posing as an assistant or aide to General Vaughan. The businessmen related that they had paid him substantial fees and expenses.

2. Maragon informed the subcommittee that he had only two bank accounts, both in Washington banks. Committee investigators headed by Chief Counsel William P. Rogers uncovered another "active" account in a San Antonio, (Tex.) bank in which Maragon had deposited $40,000.

2. The accountant testified a 6 percent return for C. & P. was adequate in the light of its continued stable income, steadily growing business and its location in a city where the presence of the Federal Government contributes to a stable economy.

McElfresh declared the 6 percent return would permit the A. T. & T. to continue the $9 annual dividend on the C. & P.'s proportionate share of the parent company's common stock.

The Federal Government opened its case at the afternoon session with testimony by Dr. Charles A. R. Wardwell, chief of the current business Analysis Divsion of the Commerce Department. He submitted several exhibits to show the economy of the District was "more stable than the United States as a whole" and this trend was indicated for the future, too.

Economist Hits Virginia C. & P. Rate Base Plan

Richmond, Va., Dec. 13 (AP).—Opponents of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia's petition for a rate increase today vigorously assailed the "reproduction cost new" method of establishing a utility rate base.

The rate base—the valuation on which the C. & P. should be allowed a fair return, should be the actual costs of the company's properties less its actual depreciation reserve, said Dr. John Bauer, New York economist testifying as an expert for the objectors.

Bauer said it is practically impossible for a regulatory tribunal or anyone else to find out what a reproduction cost value is. He said a reproduction cost concept involves appraisals and estimates and guesses that "throw exactness and definiteness overboard."

Ward Party Sails After New Clash

Nationalists Say British Violate Seas

Hongkong, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—The commander of China's blockade fleet charged today that British warships are convoying merchantmen "within Chinese territorial waters," the Nationalist Central News Agency reported.

A Central dispatch from Tinghai, Natonalist naval base, quoted Admiral Liu Kwang-kai as saying two British warships escorted seven freighters into Chinese waters late last month.

A British naval spokesman said no violations of Chinese territorial waters by British warships have been reported here, but admitted Britain and China have not been able to agree on the extent of China's seas.

The last Nationalist defenders withdrew from Chengtu, short-lived "refugee capital," last night, after blasting installations at the huge airfield used by American B-29 bombers during World War II, leaving the city open to Red occupation.

Aboard the Steamship Lakeland Victory, off Taku Bar, China, Wednesday, Dec. 14 (U.P.).—This American freighter, carrying United States Consul General Angus Ward, his wife and 18 companions, released Monday after being held prisoners by Chinese Communists for a year, hauled up anchor today and headed for Japan.

The ship's departure, delayed three days by slow cargo loading operations, was held up a few minutes by a Chinese Communist policeman who demanded a photograph he claimed had been taken of him aboard the Lakeland.

The Lakeland arrived here Saturday. Ward and his party came aboard Monday, not however without a bitter wrangle with Communist authorities over who would sign release receipts for the party. Cargo handling was completed today and the ship upanchored at 12:15 p. m. (11:15 p. m. EST Tuesday).

She is scheduled to arrive at Fusan (Pusan) Korea, Friday. At this time, it was not known with certainly what port in Japan the ship would head for, but it was believed she would dock at Yokohama.

Mexico Says Reds Conspire To Seize Rule

Mexico City, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—Government officials charged tonight that well-organized Communists are trying to overthrow the Mexican government.

Federal District Attorney General Carlos Franco Sodi said "a plan tending to provoke a seditious movement to overthrow the government in Mexico, transform the constitutional order and impose a Communist regime on the republic has been discovered."

The attorney general's office cited more than 3000 letters and documents found in the residence of Valentin Campa, Communist labor leader now held on fraud charges.

Sodi also charged Communists are trying to influence workers in Costa Rica, Salvador, Guatemala and Colombia.

"Simultaneous demonstrations throughout the nation, using as a pretext the high cost of living, have been planned for 1950," Sodi affirmed. "The directors of this plan called for 'direct action' if necessary."

"This action," he said, "according to their own words, would permit them to substitute the government of the republic with another of Marxist type."

Mrs. Auchinloss Loses Connecticut Suit on Trust Fund

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 13 (AP). The Connecticut Supreme Court held today that Mrs. Nina G. Auchinloss of Washington, D. C., is not entitled to reimbursement for trust funds left to her two children for sums spent for their support and education.

The children were the beneficiaries of trust funds established in the will of their paternal grandmother, Mrs. Emma Brewster Auchinless of Fairfield.

Their mother appealed from a Superior Court decision denying an order reimbursing her from the tust funds.

The children appealed from a denial of an order directing that income of the trusts be spent for their benefit.

10-Year Occupation Of Germany Urged

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Occupation of Germany for another 10 years, to avert resurgence of nationalism and "reorient" German organizations and institutions, yesterday was proposed by Representative Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.).

Just back from Europe with a four-man House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee, Javits said members of the group now preparing a report are largely agreed on a lengthy German occupation.

He said they were pretty unanimous also against setting up of any German military force.

Other members of the subcommittee were Representatives Joseph L. Pfeifer (D. N. Y.), chairman, Thomas S. Gordon (D. Ill.) and Clement J. Zablocki (D. Wis.).

Vavits said latent nationalistic tendencies in Germany are manifest in organizational activities, the German civil service and some of the laws the West German Parliament is considering. Anti-Semetism, as well, is still "deeply rooted," he said.

"I wouldn't want to call it renaissance of nazism because it is quiescent and I think can be reoriented in time along democratic lines," he said. "The trade union movement, once ruled by authoritarian bosses, offers the best means of broadening the base."

In addition, Javits said he thought occupation authorities should continue to push for a new civil service system and should not hesitate to "veto" any authoritarian laws.

"If aggressive nationalism comes in Germany, it will come in some other form, with different leaders," he predicted.

He predicted occupation costs would drop gradually and that the American people would go along with a lengthened occupation if they realize how large are the stakes in development of a nonaggressive German economy.

Javits said these other conclusions from his tour were "personal" and did not necessarily reflect the views of other members of the subcommittee:

1. Future ECA emphasis should shift from industrial recovery to a search for new markets for West-Europe's goods, to replace those closed by the Iron Curtain to the East.

2. To that end, he urged the President's "Point 4" program as "the big effort that has to be made if we want to make ECA work and find new markets."

3. As a condition of aid, ECA should stipulate to colonial powers that their colonies must be open to all for economic development, without discrimination in favor of the owning or administering country.

4. The displaced persons problem will be "pretty well solved" when Congress passes the liberalized DP bill.

5. Our arms embargo against Israel should be "reexamined" in the light of continued shipment of arms from Great Britain to the Arab states of Egypt, Iraq and Japan.

6. Only the "Holy places" in Jerusalem should be internationalized. He said it had been obvious to him from the start that internationalization of all Jerusalem wasn't practical. To maintain its prestige, he said the United Nations ought to try to work out a more reasonable "accommodation" between Israel, Jordan and the U. N.

Chevy Chase Pupils Get An Unscheduled Holiday

Pupils of the Chevy Chase Elementary School received an unscheduled holiday yesterday while workmen repaired the heating plant.

Classes were canceled after discovery Monday of leaks in the boiler, but K. P. Grabarkiewicz, maintenance director, doused hopes for a continued pre-Christmas holiday by saying the boiler would be working by school time today.

Kostov Denounced By Own Attorney

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 13 (U.P.)—In a hoarse whisper, former Deputy Premier Traicho Kostov today again defied the Communist court that brought him to trial and declared his innocence of treason and espionage.

Kostov refused to incriminate himself even after his defense attorney called upon him to repent his crimes.

"I have never worked for foreign intelligence and I have never been a police informer."

Then he said he had always respected the Soviet Union. He refused to plead for mercy.

Kostov attempted to continue for two and one-half minutes from the defendants' bench, but his words were drowned by hisses and catcalls.

Throughout the trial the proceedings have been translated and relayed at once to reporters wearing earphones. But this was not done for Kostov's speech—the last he made. Court officials said the translators could not hear him.

One defendant spoke after Kostov, then the trial ended. The court said sentences would be pronounced later, at a date still to be set. Attendants believed it may be within two days.

The prosecution has demanded the death penalty for all 11 defendants. The other 10, who confessed to plotting against their country, admitted their guilt again today in brief, final statements. Almost all of them implicated Kostov.

In oratorical tones, white-haired, elderly Dr. Dykumedjiev, Kostov's attorney, spoke for one hour and 15 minutes against his client, recapitulating the prosecution's speech of yesterday and concluding that all the charges against Kostov had been proved.

Kostov rose stiffly to his feet from the left end of the front row of benches. The spectators leaned forward closely. He started to speak. The commotion that broke out when he maintained his innocence stopped only when Kostov's lips stopped moving.

Woman Dies, Police Hold Son-in-Law

A 49-year-old Alexandria woman, Mrs. Lena Merchant, 225 Lynhaven dr., died yesterday shortly after she tried to break up an argument between her daughter and son-in-law at her home.

The son-in-law, Donald Rainey, 21, of 211 W. Glebe rd., is being held by Alexandria police on an investigation charge and charges of assault sworn to by his estranged wife, Dorothy.

Inspector Russell A. Hawes, Alexandria chief of detectives, said Rainey struck his mother-in-law during the altercation that began about 11 p. m. Monday night.

Alexandria Coroner John A. Sims said an autopsy yesterday showed death was caused by a heart condition, but said he would not issue a certificate until he talked with police.

Reds Use Veto On Indonesia Resolution

Lake Success, Dec. 13 (AP).—Russia used the veto twice in the United Nations Security Council today to beat a resolution congratulating the Dutch and Indonesians on The Hague round table agreement setting up the United States of Indonesia.

This ran the Soviet string of vetoes to 43.

Council President Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton of Canada said defeat of the resolution would have no effect on the work of the Council's Commission for Indonesia. One part of the vetoed resolution called specifically for the commission to help in the transfer of sovereignty to the 70 million people of the USI.

McNaughton said the commission would continue its work under the original resolution which set it up.

The Council defeated, 9 to 2, a Soviet Ukrainian resolution which would have abolished the Indonesian commission and censured the Dutch for their behavior in Indonesia.

Finland Grows 'Reckless,' Pravda Says

Moscow, Dec. 13 (AP).—Pravda today accused Karl A. Fagerholm, Social Democrat Prime Minister of Finland, of dragging his country into "bloody, senseless adventures," such as the two wars fought with Russia in the last decade.

The Communist Party newspaper said Fagerholm, in a radio speech on December 6, Finland's Independence Day, had advocated changing the holiday to the Anniversary of the Soviet-Finnish winter war of 1939-40.

The leading editorial said this proposal was unneighborly and in "clear contradiction of the spirit and letter" of the Soviet-Finnish Friendship Treaty of 1948.

Pravda said Fagerholm wanted to abandon December 6 as Independence Day because it reminded Finns of Soviet friendship since they received their independence from the hands of the young Soviet Republic.

The editorial ridiculed Fagerholm's declaration that the war of 1939-40 was fought for independence. It said Russia could have occupied the country for an extended period after the armistice of 1944 but did not do so out of regard for the feelings of the Finnish people.

Acalotti Found Guilty; Jailed to Await Sentence

that bond be set, asking that the Government be prohibited from using in future cases anything Acalotti might tell the probation office, and announcing that he would file a motion for a new trial immediately.

Ready to Sentence

Judge Holtzoff interrupted Ford and said he was "ready to impose sentence now", if any limits were placed on the probation officers in questioning the defendant.

"Let us assume that the jury's verdict is a just one," Ford resumed.

"I think it is", Judge Holtzoff interrupted again. "It is not only fair and just. It shows a keen discernment of the weight of the testimony on the two counts."

Continuing his argument for bond, Ford said that Acalotti had no previous record except for one arrest on a disorderly charge in which he forfeited $50 collateral.

Question of Law

"It seems strange that this defendant never raised one finger to carry out any threat," he said. "Not only did he not do that, but he was with the same character after March." Throughout the trial Ford referred to Miss Franklin as "that character."

Ford also said he was going to move for a new trial on the basis of a "substantial question of law."

Prosecutor William Hitz, asked by Judge Holtzoff for his views, urged that the defendant be committed. He said there was no substantial question of law involved, and he added "Mr. Ford was given great latitude during the trial."

Ford Objects

This was more than Ford could stand.

He rose in objection, and addressing Judge Holtzoff, roared: "I wouldn't have brought this up if Mr. Hitz hadn't mentioned it first, but I firmly believe he was given more latitude in this case than I ever heard in trying cases in this court for 25 years daily."

Obviously disturbed, Judge Holtzoff answered "The court has to contradict Mr. Ford. The court feels counsel was limited to the evidence and that the court held the Government pretty strictly to the issues."

The judge then told the crowded courtroom "It is the usual practice to commit defendants who have been found guilty by trial. Occasionally bond is permitted if the defendant pleads guilty."

ATTILIO ACALOTTI
Found guilty

"The court feels he is a sinister influence and should not exercise discretion in his favor," Judge Holtzoff continued.

"There has been no denial that he engaged in gambling and bootlegging, and the defendant is one of the men who converted what was a nice residential neighborhood into one of the criminal centers of town."

Judge Holtzoff then withdrew his order for a pre-sentence investigation. With that Acalotti was committed to jail.

Miss Franklin Appears

The case marked the first appearance of Miss Franklin in any of the trials to result from eight mass raids under the direction of U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay on March 25. Many of the search and arrest warrants for the arrest of 36 persons in those raids were supported by her affidavits. For eight months lawyers for the 36 have been shouting "Where is Bernice Franklin?"

When she finally appeared on the stand in the first day of the trial Wednesday, Miss Franklin was bringing to an end a step she took last February when she came to The Washington Post with her story of Washington gambling. The Post took her story and her to Fay.

Dressed in a brown beret and matching suit, she spoke softly and slowly. During six hours on the stand she made these dramatic charges and admissions:

Charges and Admissions

1. Acalotti regularly paid off three Washington policemen and associated with two others.

2. Acalotti regularly settled his gambling debts in the office of Herman Cohen, street sales manager of the Washington Times-Herald.

3. She and Acalotti lived together, "as man and wife," from February to Thanksgiving Day, 1948.

4. She left her husband and six children on the advice of the Prince Georges County Board of Public Welfare.

5. Acalotti knew every occasion she testified before the special gambling grand jury and the matters to which she had testified.

6. She used to take numbers and horse bets over the telephone, while she was living with Acalotti and using his new Cadillac car.

7. On March 4 she telephoned Acalotti at the apartment of Miss Ruth Ensor and Mrs. Nola Andrews, 1223 12th st. nw., and he had said to her, "If you get these people in trouble, I'll see that your face is bashed in."

8. On March 25, Acalotti said to her, again over the telephone ". . . if you don't keep your mouth shut, it's going to be shut permanently."

Cross-Examination

Under rigorous cross-examination by Ford, she said she had made an affidavit for the Times-Herald while she was a Government witness.

Miss Ensor and Mrs. Andrews also appeared as Government witnesses and corroborated the threat of March 4, the threat which Acalotti was convicted of uttering. There was no testimony offered to corroborate the other threat.

Both women also said that Acalotti had told them Washington gamblers were taking up a collection "to get rid" of Miss Franklin after the mass raid was made.

Attacked Witnesses

The defense concentrated on attacking the credibility of the witnesses. Three of the policemen named by Miss Franklin took the stand to deny they had received payoffs. They are Private Kenneth A. Winters, Sergt. Arthur E. Fredette, and Detective Sergt. Charles Burns. Detective John T. McCarthy, named by Miss Franklin as an associate of Acalotti's, did not appear. A "Private Morrison," named by her as one of those who received payoffs, was not listed on police records.

Ford also made Mrs. Andrews admit that she had signed an affidavit in May, while she was his client, in which she categorically denied that Acalotti had ever used her telephone to threaten Bernice Franklin. This affidavit, in direct variance with her testimony for the Government, was made in connection with a suit she filed to prevent removal of her telephone. Fay sought to remove, and did remove, the phone on the grounds that Acalotti had used it in connection with his numbers business.

Mrs. Andrews testified that she had told Ford of the threats. Ford then obtained the court's permission to waive the privileged relationship between client and counsel and questioned Mrs. Andrews about convictions for violating the Volstead Act.

In a 5-minute charge, Judge Holtzoff yesterday instructed the jury to ignore "quite a number of other matters which have crept into the testimony in this case.

"The only question for you to determine is 'Did the defendant commit the offense with which he is charged.'"

"The Government witnesses are not on trial here," he told the jurors. "The Government cannot choose its own witnesses, but must call such witnesses as are available.

"Quite often in criminal cases, the witnesses themselves are not in high standing in the community," he said.

"The police officers are not on trial," he continued. "Their testimony was permitted as a matter of fairness to them only."

Principles of Law

Judge Holtzoff then outlined to the jurors, sitting on their first criminal case, the general principles of law involved. He told them an indictment was not an indication of guilt. He defined reasonable doubt. And he told the jurors they were the sole judges of the credibility of witnesses. "You can disregard testimony you believe to be wilfully and falsely given, but you are under no obligation to do so."

The judge then said that the Government had to prove three things:

(1) That Bernice Franklin was a witness "before this court." He said that a grand jury and the United States Commissioner were both "arms of this court."

2. That Acalotti knew she was a witness. He said that knowledge could not be proven directly and that the Government had produced witnesses who said that Acalotti did know Miss Franklin was a witness.

3. That Acalotti "corruptly endeavored to intimidate" Miss Franklin. He said that a threat to do injury constituted an attempt to intimidate.

He told the jurors that "Bernice Franklin's testimony is corroborated by Ruth Ensor and Nola Andrews. Each testified she overheard the defendant make the threat."

Rigsbee Held In Poolroom Slaying Case

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered James Abbott Rigsbee, 35, held for grand jury action on a charge of murdering Joseph Herman "Big Joe" Scheve, 56-year-old convicted gambler, of 4515 Longfellow st., Hyattsville, Md., in a poolroom here last Saturday.

Rigsbee

The jury heard testimony that Scheve threatened Rigsbee with a Boy Scout knife in an argument preceding the shooting.

Ernest N. White, 38, of 705 4th st. nw., who said he had known "Big Joe" for 18 years, testified he loaned the knife to Scheve in the poolroom at 913 9th st. nw. Scheve, he said, held it in his hand with the blade open while arguing with Rigsbee.

"Big Joe," testified White, returned the knife to him after Rigsbee left.

Rigsbee, whose address was given as 1734 Trinidad ave. ne., in a signed confession told police he came back to the poolroom after getting a pistol and shot and killed Scheve.

Another witness, George Duncan, 23, of 3004 17th st. ne., who said he was two feet from Scheve when Scheve was shot to death, backed up the "threat" testimony.

"Scheve told me he had just run Rigsbee out of there (the poolroom) with a knife because he's no good and he (Scheve) is going to kill him," Duncan, an unemployed plumber, said.

Duncan, who said he had known Scheve for a couple of years, said "Big Joe" once told him he stabbed a man to death in 1940. Scheve also told him, he said, that a few years ago he had "belonged to some circle gang which killed quite a few people and got away with it."

Chase Ends In 7 Charges

Seven traffic charges were placed yesterday against a Washington man who led a policeman a not-so-merry chase through Northeast streets, then allegedly tried to run down the officer when he was stopped.

Andrew J. Warren, 26, of 5508 Bass pl. se., faces these charges: Assault with a dangerous weapon (the car); traveling at an unreasonable speed; passing three stop signs, at one count per sign; failing to exhibit driving permit, and failing to exhibit registration card.

Pvt. Traver J. Thomas said he noticed Warren's car passing a stop sign at Benning rd. and Central ave. ne., about 2:30 a. m. Thomas took after the auto. Two more stop signs were violated before Warren's car skidded, spun around and stopped against an embankment at 42d st. and Hunt pl. ne., the officer said.

Guilty Of Threats

Conviction of Attilio Acalotti for intimidating a Government witness should give a badly needed boost to United States Attorney Fay's antigambling campaign. Acalotti remains to be tried next month on three gambling indictments. But the fact that he has been adjudged guilty of threatening to "bash in" the face of the principal witness against him declaims eloquently that there is something rotten in the District of Columbia.

Particularly pertinent is Judge Holtzoff's observation: "There was no denial of the charges of gambling and bootlegging in this case and the court feels that he (Acalotti) is one of the men who converted what was once a nice residential neighborhood into one of the criminal centers of town." That is strong language and it is in keeping with Judge Holtzoff's strong charge to the jury and his insistence on no funny business during the trial. The jury deserves credit for seeing through the attempts of the defense attorney to bamboozle it by attacking the character of the prosecution witnesses instead of the evidence against Acalotti.

Important as it is, the Acalotti conviction is only a first step. Despite the denials by three policemen accused by Bernice Franklin of taking payoffs from Acalotti, the suspicion of corruption in the Police Department demands the most searching investigation. It is relevant not only to gambling but also to toleration of other forms of organized crime. The House District Subcommittee investigating law enforcement here could do a valuable service by making an independent probe of the Police Department a first order of business. But the District Commissioners ought not to let the matter rest there. If a gambling defendant is sufficiently moved to threaten a witness, there must be dynamite in what she says. And the Commissioners' own reputations are tied up with that of the Police Department they administer.

Another Crash

Violent death in any form is horrible, and the only thing that made Monday night's plane crash near the National Airport less horrible than the disaster last month is that most of the passengers survived. That 19 of the 23 persons aboard the Capital Airlines DC-3 were rescued from the Potomac River is due principally to the speedy and heroic work of the crash boat teams from Bolling Field.

The only similarity between the two recent crashes here is that they both occurred at the same airport. The collision on November 1 that killed 55 persons happened in daylight and in clear weather. Flying conditions Monday night were among the worst on record; airports all along the East Coast were closed in. Landings here were all by instruments. Many planes were delayed in flight or dispatched elsewhere, though a maximum of four planes was stacked awaiting this particular approach. It is significant that 78 planes landed safely on instruments here during the 20 hours preceding the crash. Incidentally, Capital had flown nearly 800 million passenger-miles without an accident.

The approaching DC-3 was using the instrument landing system (ILS), a system that enables the pilot to tell his position on the glide path by intersecting radio beams which register in the cockpit. Airport control tower employes, however, were monitoring the landing on the ground control approach system (GCA)—the radar device which shows electronically the exact location of the plane with respect to a prechartered glide path. This plane veered off course and completely off the GCA scope. Apparently motor failure was the direct cause of the crash. Whether the pilot had swerved to avoid some obstruction and became lost or whether the plane's instruments were not in calibration is in the realm of conjecture. Fortunately, recordings of tower conversations will help Civil Aeronautics Board investigators determine the part played by ground employes.

Hindsight is not much help, but one thing this crash emphasizes is the futility of using GCA for mere monitoring. GCA has been a military byword and was of immense help during the Berlin airlift. But its use among civilian airlines has been extremely limited, first because of lukewarm reception by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, which has been promoting ILS, and second because of hostility on the part of the Airline Pilots Association. The usual insistence by pilots on obtaining complete control of their planes seems foolish when a GCA "talkdown" might have prevented a crash. The question of liability for accidents when GCA is used remains to be settled and this may account for some of the CAA's reluctance to suggest such landings. If Monday's disaster does nothing else, however, it ought to spur the demand for wider use of radar aids, both on the ground and in planes, as the most foolproof navigational system yet devised.

Freedom Offensive

As the "cold war" has extended from months into years, the fear that it might suddenly develop into a shooting and bomb-dropping war has markedly diminished. The East and the West appear to have settled down to a test of strength over a long period. In some respects that is an enormously encouraging circumstance. On the other hand, it unquestionably means a continued drain upon our resources for national security, a drain which is much more difficult to sustain under a democratic regime than under a well-disciplined communistic dictatorship. From this point of view it is by no means certain that continuance of a stalemate over a long period of time would redound to the advantage of the free world.

It is not to be supposed that the mere passage of time will bring any change in the Soviet objective. The unwavering aim of the Communist movement is to destroy the bourgeois states. Only the tactics of pursuing that end show any variation. If shooting war is avoided, as an overwhelming portion of the American people hope it will be, must we then anticipate indefinite continuation of the cold war? That question was sharply raised in New York last night by John Foster Dulles. The former Senator advanced the thesis that, as a permanent state of affairs, living side by side with a despotic system devoted to secrecy and possessed of the atomic bomb would be an intolerable situation. Consequently, he believes that our foreign policy ought to look toward dissolution of the menace as well as toward guarding ourselves against attack.

He rules out immediately, as we think all reasonable men must, the idea of a preventive war. The struggle must be waged, therefore, within the realms of human thought and emotion. In these spheres the Communists, with their political and social penetration and their appeal to mass discontent and class rivalries, have proved themselves to be formidable opponents. By comparison the Western powers have done little to capture the minds of men. What Mr. Dulles suggests is that we must take the psychological offensive if we are not to yield an enormous advantage to the fanatical and disciplined Communists.

One should not overlook the constructive psychological results of the European Recovery Program and the aid we have given other countries seeking to protect their freedom. Nor should the Voice of America be forgotten. But there is an unfortunate tendency to assume that our interests are limited to the areas that are strategically important to us. Actually, of course, a free world is the one real hope for peace.

The United States ought not be indifferent to the struggle for freedom anywhere. It does not follow that we should subsidize or give military aid to every group struggling against dictatorship and oppression. Certainly the military phase of our assistance to other peoples ought to be kept strictly tied to defense of the Atlantic community of which we are a part. Great care must also be exercised not to fritter away our substance and blur our aims by giving aid to tyrannical, corrupt and discredited regimes, such as the ousted Nationalist government of China, merely because they are fighting communism. But we can help to keep the spark of freedom alive everywhere. We can encourage enslaved peoples to work for their own emancipation, and we can maintain a healthy and virile demonstration of the benefits of a free society in our own country.

Some months ago a freedom offensive was launched by the National Committee for Free Europe under whose auspices Mr. Dulles spoke. Its weapons are chiefly moral and psychological. But these are the weapons on which we must rely to save the world from the long-range dangers of the present uncertain truce. In our opinion, they need to be greatly strengthened. Indeed, only a society dynamically devoted to freedom is likely to remain free in this revolutionary age.

Coffee Prices

Scarce buying, hoarding and speculative activity are frequently mentioned as causes of the dizzy rise in coffee prices. To be sure, speculation is stimulated by rising coffee prices and has some effect on market movements. Hoarders and scare buyers, too, undoubtedly have helped to boost coffee prices by taking supplies off the market. But the real cause of the current price squeeze is the shortage of supplies.

The American people became accustomed during the war years to a system of controlled prices and rationing that has unconsciously influenced their thinking about price movements. They are angered by sharp price rises and inclined to attribute them to some kind of chicanery or illicit dealings. Yet, in the absence of controls, increases in prices are the only regulators of consumption. If supplies are short in relation to demand, rising prices automatically reduce consumption. Contrariwise, if supplies are abundant, prices fall and consumption increases.

Sometimes this regulatory system works hardship; but so does the system of controlled prices, as our war experience showed. Housewives soon discovered, when supplies were low during the war years, that fixed prices put no brake on buying. As a result, the hoarders and the firstcomers took all, and everybody else went away empty-handed. At least coffee drinkers are able to buy their favorite beverage, though here and there hoarders have raided stores and forced them to shop around. For that at least they can thank the system of free pricing that regulates buying and restrains hoarders, and imposes an upper limit on price increases by forced reduction of consumption.

Pension Dilemma

The Securities and Exchange Commission is faced by the difficult problem of determining the effect on balance sheets of the financial liabilities incurred by companies agreeing to institute pension systems of the kind imposed on the steel industry by the CIO. Chairman McDonald of the SEC points out that companies entering into such pension contracts will either have to set up reserves to care for accrued liabilities or put them on a current payroll basis. Reserves sufficient to cover past-service liabilities, Mr. McDonald warns, would be so huge that they would "wreck most corporations" and wipe out the corporate surpluses and impair the capital of many financially strong companies. On the other hand, adoption of the method of paying pensions out of current income would leave the workers pensionless, if the company should go out of business or be forced to suspend payments for lack of money.

Mr. McDonald had no suggestion to offer as to the solution of the problem except to say that the answer would depend upon the requirements of individual corporations. Some corporations already have pension systems and have built up reserves to cover in whole or part accrued liabilities. Others must start from scratch and may elect to build up gradually the reserves needed to take care of accrued liabilities. In many cases, we surmise, the pay-as-you-go method will be preferred and pensioners will just have to hope that the companies employing them will continue to prosper and be able and willing to finance the pension program for the indefinite future.

Mr. McDonald's remarks reinforce Professor Slichter's warning as to the inherent unsoundness of union pension plans that make no provision for meeting the accrued liabilities with which they start. "In many cases," he says, "the cost of pensions in a decade or so will be so large that the unions will have to consent to a reduction in the pensions in order to gain wage increases. Consequently, the so-called security offered by many union-negotiated pension plans is illusory." John L. Lewis' pension plan for the coal industry is a conspicuous example of the utter unreliability of a private pension system financed by current contributions from employers without provision for accrued liabilities.

Virginia School Boards

One of the more vexing anomalies of county government in Virginia is the manner in which school administration is insulated from the people. Virginia law provides that school board members shall be appointed by school trustee electoral boards. The trustee electoral boards are appointed by circuit judges, who themselves are appointed by the Legislature. Inevitably the effect of this thrice-removed control is to make school boards less than responsive to the wishes of the electorate. The only exceptions to this devious pattern are found in independent cities and Arlington, Albemarle and Henrico Counties. Arlington is the only county in which the school board is elected directly by the people.

State Senator Harry F. Byrd, jr., of Winchester has proposed what seems to us a laudable plan for removing some of the baffles. His bill would abolish county school boards as such and transfer their functions to the directly elected county supervisors. The people would thus have a more direct voice in the management of their schools. The responsibility for administering schools would be coupled with the responsibility for levying taxes. Schools now take the bulk of county revenues, and the charge of insufficient attention to school finances was a major issue in the recent Arlington supervisor election.

It would be unfortunate, of course, to disturb arrangements such as that in Arlington in which the school board already is chosen by popular vote. A way around this might be to provide for referendums in each county whereby residents could decide whether to leave school powers directly with the supervisors, vest them in an independent elected school board or permit the supervisors to appoint the school board.

Undoubtedly there are instances in which the present system is working well because men and women of high caliber have been appointed to school boards. It is possible, too, that schools under county supervisors could become political footballs. But that possibility is present now, and there is no popular check on it. In the long run removal of the schools from a paternalistic system would be an influence both for better schools and better supervisors. Anything which brings the schools closer to the people is bound to emphasize this prime civic responsibility.

HIDDEN GROVE

This hidden grove is beautiful;
Somber trees and greening pool,
Grasses tall and still, and cool
Gentle wind so lightly blowing.

There was never way of knowing
How a seed begins its growing,
Nor where the mind of man is going
After dust has closed the brain.

But the flashing of the rain
On sunny woods, a lonely crane,
And the moon's ethereal stain
On the sea are truths we know.

Hear the wind so lightly blow.
This is wisdom: watching slow
Shadows move and grasses grow,
By a hidden forest pool.

Census Safeguards

Drew Pearson's column of December 11 might create some wrong impressions in the minds of laymen which, I think, should be cleared up.

In that article, Mr. Pearson states that a recent report by Commerce Secretary Sawyer on monopolistic trends in business failed to give the names of the corporations involved. According to your columnist, "Sawyer's aides further stated that the Census Bureau might 'violate the law' if it provided Sawyer or anyone else with the names of individual companies since this was a 'confidential' matter. Inference was that the big trusts, fearing some advantage to competitors, would refuse to open their books to the Government unless their corporate identities were protected."

In the first place, corporations are required to give information for the census of manufactures. Under Section 210, Title 13, of the United States Code, refusal to give such information is a misdemeanor. This statute has been on the books since 1929. Secondly, the Census Bureau is forbidden by express statutory provision to reveal the identity of corporations submitting statistics for the census of manufactures.

Mr. Sawyer's aides were, therefore, correct, in refusing to divulge the names of individual companies involved in the report, since they would—not might—violate the provisions of the statute. In this connection a Census employe who, "without the authority of the Director of the Census, publishes or communicates any information coming into his possession by reason of his employment" is guilty of a felony.

These provisions of the Census legislation are not designed to cloak the operations of alleged monopolies, as Mr. Pearson indicates. They have a basis in business conditions, which affect small and big companies alike. No business executive wants to reveal to the Government any information which, by official publication, would divulge so-called "business secrets." These secrets include data concerning profits, cost of operation, and individual accounting methods. In its 1929 enactment, therefore, Congress took a realistic view of business conditions. It required this information to be divulged to the Government, for publication in summary form only.

Incidentally, the information which Mr. Pearson says is kept secret with the help of the Government can be readily obtained from Moody's Industrials.

"Jerusalem"

In reply to the December 12 letter on Jerusalem from G. G., it might be well for the writer to realize exactly what is involved in the matter of internationalization by the United Nations of the Holy City of Jerusalem.

Jerusalem is divided into the Old and the New City, the latter having been built into a modern city by the Jews during the past 25 years. The modern city does not have the Holy Shrines, but the ancient part of Jerusalem has them, and this old part of Jerusalem is controlled by the Arabs of Jordan, headed by King Abdullah.

If Jerusalem should be internationalized, then certainly it should be done with Abdullah's City. Why should the U. N. want to control a new, modern city, without the Holy Places, a city which has been governed democratically by Israel? One hundred thousand Jews live and work in modern Jerusalem. All they want now is peace and security and their right to be governed by Israel.

If G. G. will study The Washington Post editorial of November 30th, he will see that perhaps the U. N. has bitten off more than it can chew. Dr. Ralph Bunche states that, "after all, the United Nations might not be in a practical position to enforce the internationalization of Jerusalem," and the editor continued to say that "that body is not in a moral position to do so." Christmas Music

Anent M. K. Jessup's December 10 letter on Christmas noise on F st., I would like to add my humble "aye."

This is a sympathetic invitation for Mr. Jessup to stroll through the Shirlington (Va.) shopping center and soak up the mellow, low-volume, but high-fidelity Christmas harmony emanating from dozens of quality reproducers fed from a single source: a radio-broadcast-type turntable. A discreet, but endless selection of popular and semiclassical compositions creates for anyone an ethereal feeling of cordial good will.

Pat On The Wrist

Just saw your headline about the "6 to 18 months" the un-American Representative Thomas got for stealing from the Government. What sort of interpretation of our vaunted "equal justice for all" is it that slaps a man like Thomas on the wrist for misusing his position of trust? In the same issue of your paper you report a George Watts, jr., as having been sentenced, for a series of burglaries, to three years. I venture to guess that the total value of Mr. Watts' thefts is likely to be less than what Thomas stole.

Ewing's Propaganda

Oscar Ewing has certainly made what, in medicine, is termed a "snap diagnosis." He had less than a week to "investigate and observe" the state of medical care under England's bankrupting socialized plan—yet, with so little time to compile his observation, Mr. Ewing was able to state to the press that he considers socialized medicine highly desirable for the United States of America. Apparently, his mind was made up before he arrived in England and this trip, at the taxpayers' expense, is to be used as propaganda favoring the Truman program.

Negroes On The Bench

The recent legislation increasing the number of judges on the Federal bench by six and the Municipal bench by three serves to point up a glaring inequality in the local administration of justice as it affects the colored citizenry.

As president of the National Bar Association, representing more than 900 of the Nation's 1200 lawyers of color, I wish to make some observations on the local judiciary as it affects the Negro lawyer, which local situation is a fair sample of the situation nationally.

I have been a member of the local bar for 20 years. When I first came to the bar, there were 19 members of the local judiciary in all courts. At that time there were two women members, one Jewish member and one Negro member. I have seen that number exactly double; there are now 38 members, excluding the three yet to be appointed to the Municipal Court. There are now four women on the benches of the various courts, four Jewish members, but still only one Negro. I do not have the statistics as to the Catholic representation but I am positive that there has been a corresponding, if not larger, increase of that minority.

The Supreme Court has time and time again struck down as discriminatory the systematic exclusion of Negroes from petit and grand juries, observing that it was just as vicious to systematically exclude them by custom, as it was to exclude them by statute. The same reasoning which condemns the practice of the systematic exclusion of persons from the juries would seem equally cogent, if not more so, as it affects the judiciary itself.

The local situation is due very largely to the illiberal and discriminatory policies of the District of Columbia Bar Association which excludes from its membership Negro lawyers. I have never known the District Bar Association to indorse a Negro attorney for a judgeship here, save perhaps in one instance, for the place traditionally held by a Negro.

The Washington Bar Association composed of the colored lawyers of the city, has for the past 15 years waged a fight, in vain, against this system. It has sought unsuccessfully to have a colored person appointed to one of the recent vacancies in the District Court and the United States Appellate Court. Because of the obvious inequity in the present situation, the Washington Bar Association has urged that at least two of the present three vacancies in the Municipal Court be colored appointees.

The distressing information persists, however, that no colored appointments will be made to the newly created positions. It is not gainsaid by anyone that there are qualified Negro attorneys who would make capable and outstanding judges.

In the present moral climate, with both the national and international emphasis on civil rights, it would seem that at least here in this Federally controlled District, we would demonstrate our faith in the democratic process, by having a completely integrated judiciary. It would also have the effect of increasing the respect of one third of our local citizenry in the impartial administration of justice.

Such judicial appointments would also have a tendency to integrate Negroes generally in our courts. With the possible exception of the District of Columbia government, our courts have the worst record for integration of qualified colored employes of any governmental agency in Washington. Except for a few file clerks, there are no clerks in either the District Court or the Appellate Courts, either United States or Municipal. In the probation office of the District Court there is not a single Negro probation officer, although we are constantly reminded that more than 20 per cent of the business of the criminal courts affects colored persons. The judges of the District Court have never appointed a Negro to the Committee of Admissions and Grievances and have never appointed a Negro on the Jury Commission, although they have been urged to do so for many years.

Accident Pictures

To the December 8 complaint of Bayard Evans in his letter describing the newspaper space which is being devoted to crime and criminals, I would add that it is even more revolting to see the photographs taken at the scenes of accidents, showing the dead and injured, and the close-up pictures of persons in grief or mental agony caused by someone's tragic death, or a death sentence, or other calamity. These photographers are ghoulish in their fervor. Nothing is sacrosanct to them.

Inventory On Liberty

By Malvina Lindsay

This Side The Goddess

IT'S BEEN some time since you departed from New York above ground, and you turn back on the ferry for a last look at Sodom—or Carcassonne, as the case may be. But looming up toward the ocean side is the Lady With the Lamp. Her light draws your eyes from the receding skyline. How blazing her torch! You had never realized its dominance on the land side.

On the train the Goddess pursues you and the other passengers returning to "inside America." Her light shines in the distance every time you glance out the window. "There's still the Goddess of Liberty!" one passenger remarks to another. Finally the light diminishes to a flicker, leaving you vaguely uneasy. This is something new, this impact of the statue from this side the border.

You think of Washington, of the unfinished—and sidetracked—business in Congress; of the long delayed legislation to give displaced persons a fairer chance to accept the promises inscribed on the block on which the Goddess stands. You think of the ugly arguments over this in Congress, throughout the country.

You recall how you yourself in New York had kept thinking you had never before heard so many foreign tongues and accents there. You had become as sensitive to it as a dowager from Keokuk. Repeatedly you had to remind yourself "Why not?" You think of the fragile little native New Yorker with the dog collar of real pearls who whispered to you in a store that a certain unpleasant salesman was a "refugee." They were "everywhere," she added. It had been a minute before you remembered that some of the Puritan refugees in this country included "unpleasant" characters.

THE TRAIN rushes on toward Washington, the Goddess far behind. You think of the decisions awaiting Congress: of its test on the greatest issue of human liberty, genocide; of the action it must take—or evade—on civil rights, on educational opportunity, security against poverty and indigency in old age, other measures affecting the better life for man that this Nation so confidently accepted the challenge to build. You think of the last line of the Goddess' promise, "I lift my lamp beside the golden door."

You think of what the statue has meant from the ocean side these 63 years to immigrants, to homecoming Americans. Now it is meaning something more. It is flaunting to a host of visitors and observers from all over the globe what this country offers in a world of competing ideologies. You think of how many of the 26,000 foreign students from 151 countries and dependencies studying in American colleges must have been greeted by it.

You think of the thousands of exchange specialists, teachers, leaders, scientists, researchers, coming constantly to this country to see first-hand our much-vaunted way of life, of the officials and leaders of foreign countries coming here to the U. N. or on special missions. To all these people the Goddess has been our barker in front of our tent show.

YOU WONDER if it was a mistake to put that inscription on the base of the statue. No people could live up to it. Perhaps it should be erased.

Yet, you remind yourself, most foreigners are impressed with both the personal freedom and opportunity they find here. And that even though one group of citizens is crying to heaven that Americans are losing their freedom to make money and another group is crying equally loud that it is losing its freedom of speech, thought, research.

You wonder if any of the other passengers, as they peered out at the Goddess, asked themselves these questions. If you were to ask the man across from you, would he exclaim, "Sure, we're living up to what we protest! Think of all the money we've given those foreigners!" And would he remember that some of "these foreigners," the French, had paid for the statue of liberty as a gesture of friendship, with Americans contributing the base?

That was in 1886. And that year four men were hanged in Chicago chiefly because they were professed anarchists rather than because they were convicted by evidence that they had thrown the bomb in the Haymarket labor riots. These riots had grown out of labor's 20-year struggle—since the end of the Civil War—for an eight-hour day. Now it was talking of a 30-hour week. And had not court justice advanced since 1886? No, there was a good chance the man across from you would say, "We're doing pretty well . . . in spite of our mistakes. . . . Just give us a little more time."

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Sleepers Stir

THE DISCUSSION of a new approach to international control of atomic energy, now going on among the highest American policy-makers, may well come to nothing in the end. Yet it means, at least, that the somber new situation created by the explosion of the Soviet atomic bomb is beginning to be taken seriously. This alone is a great gain over the befuddled complacency which was the Administration's first response to the news of last September.

The current position may be simply summarized. Leaders of the General Advisory Committee of the Atomic Energy Commission have forcefully warned that the new situation in which we find ourselves demands a coherent, thought out policy. The inner circle of State Department officials has considered whether a modified plan of atomic energy control ought to be discussed with the Soviet Union. The problem has gone up to Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson, in whose hands it now rests.

But before Secretary Acheson can recommend to the President that we abandon the stringent Baruch plan for international control of atomic energy, he must carefully consider several major obstacles in the path.

First, there is the danger of being drawn into one of those bilateral, exclusive negotiations that the Kremlin has always desired, in which the two giant powers, Russia and America, will sit down together and divide the world. Second, there is the danger of giving an impression of doubt, uncertainty and unreliability, both to the Russians and our own allies. Third, there is the danger that our own defense plans will be thoroughly disorganized by the "new look" at atomic energy policy that is now advocated.

THE FIRST two dangers can certainly be avoided by caution, ingenuity and firm action. The third danger, of disorganizing our defense planning, will be harder to surmount. Indeed, this difficulty is growing every day, since Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson's so-called "economy" drive is more and more transforming the American stockpile of atomic weapons into a new Maginot Line. When atomic weapons look like becoming all the weapons we have, it is not easy to talk about demilitarizing atomic energy.

The position in this regard has recently been worsened, moreover, by the planning that has been done since the ratification of the Atlantic Pact. We are committed to the defense of western Europe. Both the Europeans and ourselves are aware that the weapons being provided under the military aid program are insufficient to give western Europe true security.

The Europeans have also noted the "economy"-born American disarmament program. Because we have not much else to offer, we have offered the destruction of the Soviet Union's vital centers as our contribution of western Europe's defense in case of war. This is another American commitment, of almost unimaginable significance.

There are several comments to be made on this state of affairs, all of them unpleasant. In the first place, a measure of general disarmament, to give greater security to western Europe, would probably have to go hand in hand with any plan for international atomic energy control. Even so, if atomic weapons were outlawed, we should still be called upon to make a more serious, more balanced defense effort than we are now making.

IN THE second place, however, there is every reason to believe that we ought to make this kind of defense effort in any case. As is clear from the remarkable analysis presented in Dr. Vannevar Bush's Modern Arms and Free Men, many leading scientists think the whole plan for massive, strategic use of atomic weapons may shortly become obsolete.

New means of defense against big bombers, such as ground-to-air guided missiles, are already in the prototype stage. The Russians, meanwhile, are working overtime to provide themselves with the conventional means of defense. The whole problem of air attacks on Russian targets may well be transformed in two or three years' time by Soviet production of jet fighters and the rapidly progressing installation of Soviet air warning nets. Yet no comparable air defense is being provided for western Europe, within easy range of Soviet air attack.

In short, we have made a promise of a specialized contribution to the defense of western Europe, which we may well not be able to keep, if and when the time comes. And because of Secretary Johnson's so-called economy, we are increasingly unable to make the more general contributions to the strength of the free world that this country ought to make. No situation could be more dangerous or more pernicious. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the "new look" at atomic energy control will be only the beginning of a realistic new look at the whole problem of our changing world position.

British Medicine

By Marquis Childs

Misleading Comparisons With U. S.

FEDERAL Security Administrator Oscar Ewing is in England studying Britain's national health insurance plan. If he was correctly reported in a recent interview, he said that the British plan proves that health insurance will be good for the United States. It means, of course, nothing of the kind. Any comparison between the way the British system is operating and the way a similar system might operate here is false and deceptive.

Childs

The British have for the most part too much sense to try to tell us how to run our affairs, which is a lot more than can be said for a great many Americans. But when they speak frankly and privately, those who know something about America express grave doubts that a national system federally imposed would work at this stage of America's political-social developemnt.

In London recently I talked with leaders in the Labor Party and with officials administering the national health scheme. They were fully aware of the differences between Britain and the United States which would make administration of such a system in this country difficult or impossible. Among major differences are the following:

1. FOR nearly 30 years Britain has had a system of nationally administered public medicine available to families unable to pay for their medical care. In this way a long background of administrative experience through trial and error has been built up. British doctors have come to accept public medicine on a prepaid basis.

In effect, the nationalized system was merely the extension of an approach to national medical care tried out over a long period. With comparatively little difficulty it was possible to expand the administrative system.

2. With an area many times that of Great Britain, the United States has differences of climate, geography, population and levels of living greater even than between country and country in Europe. What may be possible in Massachusetts or Vermont may not be possible in Louisiana or California.

3. The standards of local administration in Britain are very much higher than in this country. Partly this is because of long experience in administering welfare programs.

But it is also because there is in England a more conscientious approach to public office. The tendency too often in this country with its vast continental expanse is to regard Washington as a kind of mother lode to be mined at every possible opportunity. There are notorious abuses in pensions and relief locally administered. This list could be extended almost indefinitely. But it should be obvious that any analogy between the two countries is almost bound to be misleading.

For this very reason Americans who presume to attack the British system are usually off the beam. Their criticism is based on the bland assumption that American conditions must apply to Britain.

TAKE that business of wigs about which so much nonsense has been spilled over here. I looked into it a bit in England and here are the facts.

Under the national health insurance system a wig can be obtained only if the individual can show medical need for a wig. With a few minor exceptions, this means individuals who have been scarred either in the war or the blitz so seriously as to suffer humiliation and embarrassment.

There were a number of Britishers who suffered just such deforming injuries. To date about 7000 wigs have been distributed and that doesn't seem to me to be an unreasonable number.

On one thing most Americans, with the exception of a few head-in-the-sand reactionaries, do seem to be agreed. That is that the level of health in this country must be raised and that it must be done if not under the direction of Government, then with the help of Government.

As Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois demonstrated the other day, the approach does not need to be that of all or nothing at all. Douglas proposed a national insurance plan to protect all citizens from the cost of catastrophic illness—all medical costs above $150 a year for a family.

This may not be the final and ultimate solution, and Douglas modestly refrained from heralding it as such. But some such reasonable approach that does not attempt to put all of medicine in a straight jacket is obviously nearer to American needs. The danger in arbitrarily imposing a straight jacket is that all public health will be discredited.

Lewis Takes Part In Hard Coal Talks

New York, Dec. 13 (U.P.)—John L. Lewis, apparently in good spirits, arrived here today to take personal charge of contract talks between operators and his United Mine Workers, representing 80,000 Pennsylvania hard coal miners.

There were indications that some progress was made during the one hour and one-half meeting for it was decided to appoint two subcommittees of three men each, one composed of operators' spokesmen and the other of UMW officials. The subcommittees will consider technical aspects of the contract.

The first meeting of the subcommittees was set for 1:30 p. m., EST, tomorrow. Lewis said "it would be a fair assumption that I would be here tomorrow." His presence here today was considered a promising note.

More Mines Will Sign, Lewis Predicts Here

John E. Lewis said yesterday additional soft coal operators producing 2,041,056 tons a year have signed contracts with the United Mine Workers.

This brings to 11,203,956 tons the total annual production Lewis says in under contract. That is about 2.5 percent of national production.

The brief announcement from UMW headquarters said:

"Additional tonnage will sign."

Earlier in the day Lewis asked a court here to throw out a suit charging that the United Mine Workers multi-million-dollar welfare fund was "improperly disbursed and dissipated."

Lawyers for the UMW chief made the plea to Federal District Judge Burnita S. Matthews. She deferred action, pending study of the case.

George H. Livengood, former miner of Uniontown, Pa., filed the suit against Lewis and the other fund trustees last September. He asked the court to remove the trustees and force them to give an accounting of the way they spent fund money.

Livengood, who had been a beneficiary of the fund, was expelled from the union a few weeks later on a charge of "dual unionism" and failing to take his complaint to the UMW before going into court.

The case had been set for a hearing today, but Lewis' attorneys blocked it by filing the motion for a summary judgment—in other words, dismissal of the suit.

Judge Matthews, who was recently named to the district court, explained she was not familiar with details and wanted to study the case before ruling on the Lewis motion.

TOP-LEVEL TALK—Former President Herbert Hoover confers with Mrs. India Edwards, chairman of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, before they spoke at the Washington Conference of the Citizens Committee on the Hoover Report present Federal spending $43,500,000,000 for the current fiscal year, "requires that today, more than ever before, we must receive the maximum return for every dollar spent."

Several speakers bore down heavily on the potential savings still to be made.

Thomas M. Searles, Philadelphia, president of the Equity Investment Co., and head of the Hoover task force that surveyed the Veterans Administration, said the agency is bogged down by a raft of useless paper shuffling.

He said that while accurate records are necessay, the VA is "handling papers from twice to 10 times unnecessarily" and its files are "in a chaotic condition, loaded down with extraneous, useless material."

As a result, he said, even the best effort of the most loyal and most efficient employes are "lost in the vast morass of incompetence and inefficiency."

He said the head of each family already contributes through taxes about $200 a year to support the VA and that it could go as high as $1500 per family as more veterans' dependents begin drawing benefits of one kind or another.

Former Gov. Leslie A. Miller of Wyoming attacked overlapping, duplication and rivalries among the Interior Department, the Agriculture Department's Forest Service, the Federal Power Commission, the Tennessee Valley Authority, and the Army's Corps of Engineers.

"Under conflicting laws," he said, "rival Federal agencies compete for taxpayers' money in what often appears to be premature and unsound river development projects, duplicating each other's surveys and bidding against each other for local support at national expense."

Asserting that the people of the United States "have been reckless spendthrifts with our natural resources" in the past, Miller urged the conference to go after reforms immediately in an effort to save what is left.

Ambassador Ernest R. Gross, deputy United States representative to the United Nations, said Hoover Commission recommendations for strengthening the State Department have borne some fruit. Referring to the addition of two deputy Undersecretaries, he said: "The operational work load of the Secretary and the Undersecretary have been substantially reduced.

Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.), former Secretary of Agriculture, outlined opportunities for efficiency and economy reforms in that department. He estimated that clarification of functions and a regrouping of services might save 200 million dollars a year in the Production and Marketing Administration alone.

Gen. Paul R. Hawley, former chief medical director of the Veterans' Administration, said that all reserve hospital units of the armed forces at the general hospital level should be organized as armed forces units rather than separate Army, Navy and air units.

Summing up the entire reorganization record to date, Charles B. Coates, vice chairman of the citizens' group, said it was a "minor miracle which may become a major one."

figures such as adjusted gross income, exemptions, deductions, prepayment credits, payment credits, and the taxpayer's original computation, store the factors in its so-called memory, determine the taxable income in each bracket and then calculate the combined normal tax and surtax applicable to each bracket, add the totals and produce the correct answer.

"In cases of joint returns, it will divide the taxable income in half, figure the amount of tax on each half and multiply it by two. It will take the standard deduction or specific deductions, whichever is to the advantage of the taxpayer. It will show any discrepancy between the tax reported and the correct amount of tax. It performs all of these complicated functions in the unbelievable time of 1/70 of one second."

Now if another robot can be devised to produce the money to pay our taxes, we'll be all set.

The calculators are being installed on a trial basis. Similar machines will be installed in all revenue offices if they work out.

The mechanization of the Revenue Bureau will result in the eventual transfer of clerical employes to front-line tax enforcement operations.

BIG LAYOFF: Thirty-day layoff notices were given yesterday to 375 employes in the Army's Adjutant General's Office here. It will be a black Christmas for these people.

All of the employes to be fired have either war service or temporary status and some of them have had up to 10 years of Federal service. However, scores of them are on Civil Service eligible lists and they are eligible for probational appointments. They were waiting for AGO to convert them to regular appointments when the notices were handed out.

AGO officials explained that the reductions had to be made in order for the agency to live within its reduced budget. The layoff, they explained, was planned several weeks ago and had been delayed until the last possible minute.

The AGO cutback may be followed by other reductions among Defense employes in the Pentagon.

COMMERCE: The first major postwar Federal building to be constructed outside this city for "security" reasons is about to be announced. It's the five-million-dollar radio propagation laboratory of the Bureau of Standards.

It had been originally planned to center the activities here. But international relations being what they are, and with the possible bombing of this city in event of another war, it was decided to construct the radio building elsewhere. At one time a site near Charlottesville, Va., was considered. However, a site in Colorado or some other Western State is now the best bet for it.

CENSUS: After two years of controversy, it has been definitely decided to transfer some 5000 temporary Census jobs to Philadelphia. Census is to be given 200,000 feet of space in the Atwater Kent Building there, now partly occupied by the Veterans' Administration.

VA is building up a records center there. It will suspend its expansion operations for about 18 months until the temporary Census job is completed.

level Departent of Transportation.

The basic buble with the promotional agcies, the Sawyer report intimed, was that each occupied itsf with helping out a single fornof transportation.

Thus largeums spent on highways might irt the operations of the railroadsor subsidies to transocean air orations would drain off passengs from the ocean liners.

The wholquestion of subsidies, the report insisted, should be thoroughly eviewed and if they are to be coinued, the method of payments ould be overhauled.

In the en the report said, subsidies shoi probably only be granted to rriers when they were needed for easons of national defense. Theithey should probably be paid forrom the budget of the Departmenof Defense.

Furthemre, subsidies to air lines shoul be disclosed as such, and not pmitted to masquerade under the uise of "air mail payments."

The costof carrying the mail should be letermined, and paid to the lin. The rest should be classed as absidies and a separate decision nde as to whether they should be ntinued.

Sawyer strongly hinted they should no The air lines are no longer an nfant industry, the report said. It asked whether they should 'ntinue to get special treatment.

The reort recommended the general plcy that all Federal expenditure for "basic transportation facities"—new roads, airfields, hbor wo·k, etc.—should ultimatel be born by the users.

The 30,00 word document asked for a ne look at the policy governing reulation and rate-making. Or rathei it suggested a return to the origi al concepts of the regulatory agncies, when they functioned rimarily to protect the consume by giving him the best service ad the lowest freight and passenge charges.

In late years, Sawyer said, regulatins sems to have been conducted rimarily to assure the financial oundness of the carriers.

He strongly suggested the carriers be allowed to abandon nonprofitabe operations. He urged an end to discriminatory rates that were primarily designed to permit one type of carrier—say, the railroads—to snatch traffic away from another—say, the coastal vessels—though the latter might be the more efficient agency on certain routes.

The report also complained that some rates were artificially high to compensate for other artificially low and hence nonprofitable charges. This results, it was argued, in some customers footing the costs for others.

The goal in rate-making, it was implied, was a system tied in to "the fully-distributed cost of rendering the service." This would include the direct and indirect costs plus a fair rate of return on investment.

The report did not call for a consolidation into one organization of all the transportation regulatory agencies. Neither did the majority of the Hoover Commission, although two dissenting members made such a recommendation.

But Sawyer said such a consolidation probably will be necessary "eventually."

The report, which seemed to tread on the toes of almost every Federal agency concerned with transportation, received only a non-committal acknowledgement from President Truman.

He issued a statement saying that the issues raised deserved careful consideration. He said he was asking all the agencies concerned to give him their views on the policy questions discussed.

Then, he said, with their cooperation, "immediate and continuing attention will be given to the exploration of these important problems."

Observers have reported, however, that Mr. Truman is planning to recommend a transportation reorganization plan to the next session of Congress.

Arias also rejected Pearson's implication that his being in power is a veiled threat to the security of the United States.

"I have guaranteed constitutional rights for everyone, including my political enemies. The fact that Mr. Pearson's statements are printed locally proves the existence of freedom of the press in Panama. Are these signs of dictatorship?

Court-Martial Acquits Majors Of Flying-Time Fraud Charge

Two Andrews Field majors, accused of falsifying flying time records, were cleared of all charges by a court martial late yesterday at Bolling Field.

The officers, Majs. James B. Fishburn, 33, of Moscow, Idaho, and James A. McCullough, 31, of Cheverly, Md., were charged under Articles of War 95 and 96 with "acting jointly and in pursuance of a common intent" to deceive the Government.

The prosecution at the two-day hearing charged the officers on September 30, claimed two hours and 50 minutes for a flight that the prosecution said lasted only one hour and 25 minutes. On a flight October 3, they were accused of putting in for four hours and 30 minutes of flying time, which the Government contended was only one hour and 23 minutes.

The September 30 trip was from Andrews Field to Newark, N. J.; the October 3 trip was the return flight. Flying pay is based on flight time.

In the majors' defense, Attorney John A. Croghan said the only legally valid documents produced at the court martial were the disputed flight time forms. He also charged that the pretrial investigation of the case was "slipshod and slovenly."

Key witness yesterday was Sergt. Joseph R. Pavlasek, crew chief of the flights. Paslavek, a prosecution witness, said he couldn't recall the landing time on the flights. On cross-examination, he declared the time on the flight forms was not erased when he submitted them, although when they were produced at the trial there were erasures.

Last week Croghan challenged the constitutionality of the two articles of war.

Vermeer Painting Shown Here Enjoys Fabulous Reputation

By Jane Watson Crane

The Vermeer painting of "The Artist in His Studio" from the Vienna collection enjoys a fabulous reputation today. It has had a strange history.

The girl in the picture is posing with trumpet and book to represent fame. Vermeer had a modest success in his lifetime, but fame was a couple of hundred years late in arriving.

After the death of Vermeer in 1675, his widow gave the painting to her mother as security for a loan. The artist's work was not then sought after as it is now.

The canvas subsequently sank into obscurity, until in 1813, it was acquired by the Czernins for their private collection in Vienna. They bought it on the supposition that it was the work of another Dutch artist, Pieter de Hooch. It was so listed until 1866, when the signature I Ver Meer was discovered on the border of the map in the picture.

In the 1930's there were rumors that the Czernins had been offered huge sums for their painting. When Hitler came to power, he wanted the canvas for his proposed museum at Linz, and it is said that he forced a sale and paid a stiff price for it. The painting was discovered by American troops in the salt mines at Alt Aussee in Austria. United States military authorities turned it over to the Austrian government.

The belief is that the man at the easel in the painting is Vermeer, and, if so, it is the closest thing to a self-portrait known. While it reveals nothing of the man himself, it does give a clue to his manner of living and working. This artist was not starving in a garret, but painting in a luxuriously appointed room. Outlines are sketched in chalk on the canvas, and the painter has made some brush strokes in blue for the headgear of his model.

Most of the Dutch artists of Vermeer's time painted family pictures for the home. The houses were narrow, with high ceilings, and the demand was for small paintings. With great skill the painters developed simple themes—a courtyard with people gathered, a village inn, a street scene or the interior of a house.

The people for whom the artists painted were shown at their everyday activities. They were depicted at table, or with musical instruments, receiving a message or with the family doctor.

Vermeer's paintings often have been confused with those of other Dutch artists of his time. The experts still are arguing over what is his and what is not.

The Vienna canvas is larger than most of his works, and a technical miracle. While his colleagues seem to have emphasized either the background or the figures, he attained a perfect integration of the two.

Where they included animals, birds, beer mugs and other miscellany for the sake of human interest, or the story, Vermeer left out extraneous details which did not contribute to the effect of the composition as a whole.

He painted single figures rather than groups. Recurrent in his pictures are casement windows, with the light coming through, checkered floors, rugs and tapestries, and the details of maps and pictures on the walls.

There are relatively few existing paintings known to be by Vermeer. Although "The Artist in His Studio" is the most celebrated, some people prefer his smaller, more appealing works, of which "The Woman Weighing Gold" in the National Gallery's own collection is a superb example.

Palomar Telescope Termed Successful

Palomar, Calif., Dec. 13 (AP).—New photographs made with the 200-inch telescope at Palomar Observatory, the first since the huge mirror was repolished, indicate it is "a thoroughly successful instrument," says Dr. Ira S. Bowen, director of Palomar and Mount Wilson observatories.

The mirror's full range will not be achieved, however, he said, until a correction lens has been installed. "This lens will give the Hale the same focal ratio as the 100-inch, and we will then be able to get accurate comparable photographs," he said.

The Hale mirror was designed to see a billion light years into space, twice the range of the 100-inch on Mount Wilson.

Bowen said "it is going to do the work for which it was designed."

Two Planets Studied for Yule Star Clew

By Howard W. Blakeslee

New York, Dec. 13 (AP)—Two of the mythical candidates for the star of Bethlehem are making a simultaneous, dazzling appearance in the western sky this month.

They are the planets Jupiter and Venus, close together. Astronomers have studied the positions of both 1950 years ago to see whether they fitted the Biblical story.

The verdict is probably no, but this month's spectacle is probably as brilliant as the Bethlehem star.

Look to the west, soon after sunset. There are two big, white stars, one almost as big as an auto headlight far away. The bigger is Venus. She is two-and-a-half times brighter than Jupiter. This means she is just about the greatest brightness that any planet, or any star, can have.

Venus is so brilliant that the day after Christmas sharp eyes may see her in the daytime. The moon will be three days old then.

One reason why astronomers doubt that either Venus or Jupiter was the Bethlehem star is stated in this astronomical magazine.

"When one considers," it says, "that the early shepherds spent considerable time outdoors at night, and when we note that constellation study and planetary motions constituted most of the astronomy of the ancients, it is hard to believe that they could have been confused by any appearance of Jupiter and the lesser planets."

A comet or a nova is thought to be a better explanation. A nova is a star that explodes. The brightness dies away usually in a few weeks or months.

Census Battle Lull Is Just a Breather

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Battle of the Census quieted down a bit yesterday, but a Republican Congressman promised to stir it up again as soon as Congress convenes next month.

The Census Bureau, as indicated yesterday, offered to let any American questioned—and every fifth American will be—write his income on a blank and mail it in to headquarters rather than tell the census taker personally.

Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer yesterday released a report from Census Chief Philip M. Hauser which Sawyer said "puts this matter in proper perspective."

Income Query Old Stuff

Hauser said he personally decided on the income question, that "neither the President nor any other person in the White House" suggested any questions, that various types of income questions have been asked for 100 years.

Hauser noted that Herbert Hoover had been quoted as saying he does not believe the Census Act he signed in 1929 authorized the income question.

But, said Hauser, the 1930 census—while Hoover was President—asked about the value of homes and rents of tenants. And, he added, the Hoover Commission on reorganizing the Government called for "detailed knowledge" about purchasing power.

Purchasing Power

"Income," added Hauser, "is certainly an important measurement of purchasing power."

Hauser made it clear those who receive over $10,000 won't have to give details. But this means $10,000 in any of the three categories of incomes included in the inquiry—wages or salary; business, professional or farm income; interest, dividends, pensions, rents and other incomes.

That is, if a lawyer questioned earned more than $10,000 in his law practice, he would not have to give detailed figures. But if he also took in less than $10,000 in dividends he would be required to state the exact amount.

Hauser said the income questions were included after samplings for the big 1950 census were made over the past two years in many States. He pointed out that in those samplings, 477,000 persons were asked about their income and "less than one percent of the persons canvassed refused to answer the income questions."

The census chief noted that there was no penalty for refusing to answer in the sample tests, as there will be when the real thing gets under way next April.

Fails to End Clamor

But all of this did not end the clamor. Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) who started it, said the mail-it-in-direct plan was an "evasion of the basic fact that the income questions are illegal." He promised to spearhead a drive in January to force Census to drop Another Republican, Representative Robert F. Rich (Pa.), tangled at a congressional hearing yesterday with the Commerce Department's acting solicitor, Matthew Hale. Rich said he didn't see why income statistics couldn't be tabulated from income tax figures, but Hale said it would cost more to do so than to ask every fifth person next April.

Potential Markets

"I hear that but I don't believe it," snapped Rich. As for the value of such data, which Census declares is much sought after by business firms, Rich asked:

"If a family doesn't have a bathtub, do you take its name and then give it to a bathtub manufacturer?"

Hale said that was not done, but that manufacturers were interested in "potential markets."

Rich replied:

"Bathtub manufacturers should go out and find their own markets."

Safety Drive

Gen. Devers Named AAA Unit Head

Appointment of Gen. Jacob L. Devers, retired, deputy Supreme Allied Commander in World War II, as managing director of the American Automobile Association's traffic Safety Foundation, was announced here yesterday by Lou E. Holland, AAA president.

Gen. Devers

Holland pointed to the mounting death and injury toll from traffic accidents as emphasizing the importance of Devers' new post.

The AAA president outlined a three-point program which the foundation has launched to reduce accidents. Included are increasing pedestrian protection; education of pedestrians and adult drivers in better traffic habits; teaching children improved traffic behavior through expanded high school driving courses, school safety patrols and traffic safety education at the grade school level.

General Devers was commanding general of the Army field forces when he retired last September 30. Prior to that, he served during the war as chief of armored forces, commander of the North African theater and as deputy to the supreme commander of Allied forces in the Mediterranean. He also was commanding general of the Sixth Army Group.

Another Good Business Year Here Forecast

By S. Oliver Goodman

Three Washington business leaders yesterday examined the city's economic health, found it excellent and predicted that it will continue good in 1950.

They were Ralph Goldsmith, vice president and general manager of Lansburgh & Bro.; Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager of The Hecht Co., and John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank. J. A. Livingston, business columnist of The Washington Post, served as moderator at the panel discussion at a luncheon meeting of the Washington Advertising Club in the Statler.

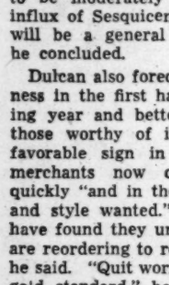
Goldsmith pointed to Washington's high employment and payrolls and said the buying power remains to assure another good year. He cautioned against "give-away prices' and emphasized the public will buy if they have confidence in existing prices. "Volume in dollars during the first six months of 1950," he added, "should be about the same as in 1949 but I expect the second half to be moderately up." A heavy influx of Sesquicentennial visitors will be a general business spur, he concluded.

Dulcan also forecast "good business in the first half of the coming year and better business for those worthy of it." He saw a favorable sign in the fact that merchants now can get goods quickly "and in the size, quantity and style wanted." Many stores have found they underbought and are reordering to replenish stocks, he said. "Quit worrying about the gold standard," he advised, "and other things you can't understand."

Reilly expressed "enthusiasm" for the future of Washington. He emphasized a two-billion-dollar backlog of buying power here, divided as follows: 600 million in Savings Bonds; about a billion in bank deposits; 300 million in savings and loan association investments, and more than eight million deposited with credit unions. "Ironically enough," he asserted, "the two billions are just about one year's income for the people of Washington." He concluded that it is reasonable to expect business "to continue at a high level for many months."

FURNITURE: Washington sales of furniture in October increased 8 percent over the same 1948 month, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. For the first 10 months this year, local furniture sales showed a gain of 10 percent over the like period last year. The Fifth Reserve District displayed an upturn of 6 percent for October and a decline of 2 percent for the 10-month period.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: John L. Sullivan, former Secretary of the Navy and now in private law practice, has been elected a director of the National Savings & Trust Co. President Bruce Baird also announced that directors of the bank had declared an extra dividend of $1 a share in addition to the regular quarterly of $2 a share . . . L. O. Braun has been appointed appliance sales manager by Graybar Electric Co., Inc., of Washington . . . William A. Berryman, who was elected vice president of Gulf Oil Corp. last May, will assume direction of the company's foreign marketing operations on December 31 . . . Charles Lukens Huston, sr., 93, today will begin his seventy-fifth year of continuous service with the Lukens Steel Co. of Coatesville, Pa.



Sullivan

INSOLVENCIES: In the first eight months this year Washington had 25 business failures as compared with 8 in the same period last year. Combined current liabilities of the local insolvencies amounted to $987,000, against $269,000 last year. The liabilities per failure averaged $39,120, against $33,625 in 1948. Figures were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

EXTRA DIVIDEND: Directors of the Union Trust Co. yesterday declared a special dividend of $1.15 a share in addition to the regular semi-annual dividend of 50 cents a share. This is an increase over 1948 when a special of 50 cents a share and a regular of 50 cents were paid for the last half. The increased special dividend, President Linwood Harrell said, reflects the best earnings year in the bank's 50-year history. In addition the board authorized the usual Christmas bonus for the bank's staff. The dividends are payable January 16 to stock of record December 30.

FRANKNESS: Here's the wording of a frank full-page advertisement from Dallas that local admen are chuckling over. It said : "We are not overstocked! We did not make a special purchase! It is not our anniversary! We are not taking inventory! It is not a storewide clearance! We just want to have a sale."

IMPROVEMENT: Seaboard Finance Co. reported net income of $2,153,224 or $2.10 a common share for the fiscal year ended September 30, compared with $2,053,568 or $2.05 a share in the preceding year. Thirteen new branch offices were opened during the year, bringing the total to 97 in 21 States. On September 30, 1949, gross receivables amounted to $45,149,117 compared with $46,428,324 on the same 1948 date.

Poets' Plaint: Publishers Shirk Duty of Underwriting Genius

By J. A. Livingston

POETRY—the magazine as well as the art—is having a costly boom in the United States. The circulation of Poetry has doubled in the last 10 years and now is about 3900. (Compare that with the Saturday Evening Post's 3,900,000 or Life's 5,400,000!) The number of unsolicited manuscripts submitted has gone up from 2000 a month two years ago to 3000 today. Obviously, both readers and poets are in an uptrend.

Livingston

But, lo! Hayden Carruth, editor of Poetry, laments: "This does not mean Poetry is any better off today. Our deficit has increased faster than our income. Our shoestring may be longer and have more knots in it, but it isn't any more secure." Poetry and poets are suffering from high postwar costs of doing business. Printers' wages are up. So are paper costs. So are mailing and miscellaneous expenses.

Poetry's problem is that too many Americans are interested in Joe Palooka or Roy Rogers or detective stories. Poetry has always been a commodity purchased by the few. And today no Edna St. Vincent Millay, with "candles burning at both ends," has captured a wide quotationship.

Poetry magazine suggests that publishers, themselves, are responsible for this indifference. They haven't the interest to nuture the rare genius who produces a great literary work. They can't be bothered with a book that sells only a few thousand copies and loses money. They want a best-seller, a book-of-the-month choice, so that profits, not prestige, will roll in. Carruth writes:

"The writer now must work, not toward the real magnificence of artistic achievement, nor even toward the serviceable and craftsmanlike invention, but toward the Great Stroke of Luck—the new masterpiece of publishers' row." Frank V. Morley, brother of Christopher Morley, now a member of the publishing firm of Eyre & Spottiswoode, of London, and once a New York publisher, suggests that the modern genius requires a revival of the eighteenth century patron.

TRUE, says Morley, the word "patron" carries "a suggestion of contempt," as when Samuel Johnson said to Lord Chesterfield: "Is not a patron, my lord, one who looks with unconcern on a man struggling for life in the water, and, when he has reached ground, encumbers him with help?" That, of course, is the perfect description of the publisher who rejects a writer in his days of trial, but wooes him with all kinds of offers and promises after he has attained fame. The inference is that if publishers got excited about young poets and writers, the public would too. And poetry and other recondite literature would flourish.

However, a publisher—like any business man—cannot live apart from his times. This is a marketplace economy. If department stores filled their bargain basements with volumes of T. S. Eliot, or Tennyson, or even such a popular writer as Ogden Nash, they'd quickly do away with all this bothersomeness we call the Christmas rush. The publisher who goes in for poetry is like the manufacturer of the Rolls Royce. He's catering to the few. And it's significant that the high-priced exclusive cars like Locomobile or Stutz or Peerless have had hard goin in the United States.

PUBLISHERS can afford risks only to the extent of their success. In another field, the duPont Co. illustrates the point. To develop nylon, the company took 10 years and spent 6 million dollars on research and development and 21 million dollars on manufacturing facilities. Said Crawford Greenewalt, president, to the House Judiciary Committee investigating monopoly: "A gamble, gentlemen, totaling 27 million dollars before we knew whether we had won or lost."

DuPont can embark on such expensive undertakings because it's successful. Likewise, publishers like Harcourt, Brace, or Knopf, or Lippincott, or McGraw-Hill. They can take on the unknowns to the extent that they've succeeded with the knowns. The writer's modern patron is the company that manages to keep its accountants and stockholders happy. If black ink exceeds the red, then it can set up a pool of venture capital to stake out the potential man of genius. For every Sinclair Lewis or Ernest Hemingway or T. S. Eliot, there are dozens of writers long since forgotten—except for the books on remaindermen's shelves or in warehouses feeding worms.

2 Million Due For Raise Soon In GI Benefits

Some two million war veterans and their dependents are due shortly for that Congress-voted raise in the amount of benefit money they receive from the Government.

The Veterans' Administration has announced that checks to be issued late this month for delivery after January 1 will show increases voted by the Eighty-first Congress. These cover service-connected disability and death compensations.

The old rates ranged from $13.80 to $138 a month for war service and $11.04 to $110.40 for peacetime service, depending on the degree of disability.

The new scale raises these rates to $15 minimum and $150 maximum for war service disabilities; $12 minimum and $120 maximum for peacetime service.

About 58,000 widows receiving compensation because of the service-connected death of a veteran, and who have one or more children, also will get increases. The monthly payment for a widow with one child is increased from $100 to $105, and the allowance for each additional child from $15 to $25.

Burke Failure Of Promotion Is Protested

NYHT News Service

A telegram urging that Capt. Arleigh A. Burke be restored to the list of officers promoted to rear admiral was sent to President Truman yesterday by Representative Henry J. Latham (R., N. Y.).

Latham, who was on active service in the Atlantic and Pacific theaters as Navy lieutenant during World War II, voiced strong objections to "this reprisal" against Captain Burke.

Captain Burke came into disfavor with some in the Truman Administration recently because of his assignment as head of "Operation 23."

"Operation 23" was a group set up in the Navy to present the Navy's views on warfare during the unification controversy.

When the Navy selection board of nine met on November 12 it selected Captain Burke as one of 18 men entitled to promotion to rear admiral from a list of approximately 200 eligible captains.

The list was sent over to the White House. It was returned with instructions to remove Captain Burke.

Court has not expressly ruled on this question as far as we are able to determine."

(The Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution provides that no State shall make or enforce a law that shall abridge the privileges or immunities of any citizen.)

Involved in the case before the Missouri court were four suits over real estate in Kansas City in which property was sold or rented to Negroes in an area formerly tenanted exclusively by whites.

Birmingham, Ala., Zoning Law Voided

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 13 (AP).—A United States District Court today ruled that Birmingham's racial zoning laws are unconstitutional.

Judge Clarence Mullins enjoined the city from enforcing its zoning ordinances. He said the United States Supreme Court repeatedly has reaffirmed its decision on the illegality of a zoning ordinance based on race or color.

Several Negroes testified they had bought lots in the North Smithfield area, but the city refused to permit them to build there because the lots were in areas zoned for white residences only.

Three houses bought by Negroes for occupancy were dynamited in North Smithfield last March.

Mayor Cooper Green testified yesterday "there would be bloodshed and tragedy" if the zoning ordinances were not enforced. He said: "There are things that go beyond written law."

CIO Wins in Test Against Left Units

NYHT News Service

The CIO has won an important round in its legal battle to establish the right to put its left-wing unions and their leaders on trial, it was disclosed yesterday.

Ten of the unions and nine of their leaders have been accused by CIO President Philip Murray and his associates of following the Communist Party line in preference to national CIO policies.

Two of the unions—the United Office and Professional Workers of America and the United Public Workers of America—failed Monday in Federal District Court in Philadelphia to obtain a restraining order blocking the CIO from conducting the trials, which it contended were "rigged" and violated the constitution and the Taft-Hartley law.

As a result, the CIO went ahead with plans, delayed temporarily because of the court fight, to try the UOPWA and the UPWA and three other leftist unions in the next few weeks.

The trials are expected to result in expulsion of the unions from the CIO and transfer of their jurisdictions to right-wing unions. The CIO convention last month at Cleveland expelled two other left-wing unions—the United Electrical Workers and the Farm Equipment and Metal Workers.

And Shaves, Too

New Yorkers Asked to Omit Baths Friday

New York, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—The eight million residents of New York were asked today to go without a bath next Friday and men were requested not to shave on that day.

"A Friday beard is a badge of honor," said Commissioner Stephen J. Carney in proclaiming the voluntary "water holiday" to dramatize the city's critical shortage and to show how much water can be saved through earnest conservation.

Carney outlined a number of other water-saving devices for Friday, including the drinking of one less glass of water than normal, and said the holiday would be a "test of the public" which, if successful, would avert more drastic water-saving restrictions.

The announcement came as water department officials disclosed that the Catskill-Croton reservoirs which supply New York had gone up during the last 24 hours for the first time since last June.

A steady rain in the area and high temperatures which melted snow accounted for the increase.

Edward J. Clark, chief engineer, said the reservoirs had risen since 8 a. m. yesterday by 1,026,000 gallons. The total supply now stands at 85,589 million gallons which is 33.8 percent of capacity.

The Water Department emphasized, however, that the shortage was only slightly helped and said two weeks of steady rain were required to end the crisis.

The city of Hoboken, N. J., also announced a water vacation—theirs to be held on Thursday.

Tests Reveal No Dog Poisoning In Arlington

Laboratory tests made on one of 13 dogs that died recently in Arlington County showed no signs of having been poisoned, County Manager A. T. Lundberg said yesterday.

The tests were conducted after alarmed pet owners in the county insisted the dogs had been poisoned by individuals. Thirteen cases of apparent poisonings were reported in a 10-day period.

Health Officer Ralph Beachley said the examination indicated the deaths were due to a dog disease known as "black tongue." He said no further tests were contemplated.

D. C. Pressmen Lose Charter Over Berry

The AFL International Printing Pressmen's Union yesterday revoked the charters of Washington Local No. 1 and a Newark, N. J., local which recently started court action over the will of the late George Berry, International president for 40 years.

The locals formed a "national policy committee" which in October filed a claim in Rogersville, Tenn., union headquarters, against virtually all of Berry's estate, estimated at from $500,000 to $750,000.

Union officials testified before a House Labor Subcommittee last June that $893,000 in union funds was used to start one of the Berry estate's major assets, the International Playing Card & Label Co.

Ousted for Court Action

Louis Lopez, president of the Washington local, said the international union informed members by letter the expulsion was for resorting to court action, in violation of the union constitution, before exhausting intraunion grievance procedures.

He said this ground was untenable because the suit was not against the international; also that final resort within the union would be to the 1952 convention. By that time, he said, it would be impossible to ask a court accounting of the estate, since the legal deadline was last October.

New Local Formed

Lopez said the international union gave members 30 days to affiliate with a new local, No. 1-A, which it has established. Penalty for not joining, he said he presumed, would be loss of union cards.

"The executive board of Local No. 1 met this morning and determined to continue the estate action and to fight the charter lifting," said Lopez. He indicated the local will seek an injunction against charter revocation.

The international union announced last night opening of Local No. 1-A, headquarters in the Kass Building, 711 14th st. nw. In a statement J. H. de la Rosa, president of the international, said that members of No. 1 "could preserve the continuity of their membership by immediate application for readmission" to the new unit.

4 School Bids Accepted in Prince Georges

Bids on four Prince Georges County schools were accepted yesterday conditional upon re-passage Saturday of the State 50-million-dollar school loan act by the General Assembly.

Opened by the county board of education, the first was on the proposed eastern area high school to be located on the Heurich tract, Colesville rd., near Queens Chapel rd., near Hyattsville. The George Hyman Construction Co. of Washington was lowest of six bidders.

Low bids on the Suitland High School, the Langley Park Elementary School and the addition to the Fairmount Heights High School also were accepted subject to the same conditions.

A delegation from the Cheverly-Tuxedo P-TA presented results of a survey made in that area which shows that by 1955 there will be 972 children of school age in the area served by the school as against 460 at present. This will necessitate 32 classrooms as against the present nine classrooms. The library and auditorium at the school also are used for classes at present.

The board sold two abandoned school houses. The three-room frame Ritchie School was sold for $7200 to C. E. Nelson, who owns the adjoining property. The Nottingham one-room frame school house was sold for $1500 to Mrs. Irene A. Downing who owns the adjoining property. An acre of ground was included with each school. The sale was by public auction at the Courthouse steps in Upper Marlboro at noon yesterday.

Athletics Buy Dillinger and Lehner for $100,000

The Washington Post Sports

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—For two days, Baseball Commissioner Chandler has been a mere spectator at the major leagues' annual winter meeting. He does not swing into action until tomorrow, when he presides at the joint meeting of the two leagues, and will cast the vote that will break any ties on the important issues.

If the two leagues don't see eye to eye on the bonus rule, or television, or night games, Chandler will cast the deciding vote.

Povich

Today, however, Chandler was talking more football than baseball. He said he would attend the Kentucky-Santa Clara Orange Bowl game on January 2, and root for his home State. "And there won't be any tie in the Orange Bowl," grinned Chandler, "because I will settle all ties in favor of Kentucky."

MANAGER BUCKY HARRIS of the Nats was registering high disgust at his failure to break the stalemate with the Yankees after a two-hour talk with Manager Casey Stengel in the Commodore lobby.

"I've just left Stengel," said Harris, "and he won't move on our deal. He wants to give us a lot of trash for Eddie Robinson. And he had the nerve to suggest that we could also make a deal for Ray Scarborough.

"When he mentioned Scarborough, I thought I'd jolt him. I told him 'Yes, we can make a deal for Scarborough. Mr. Griffith is talking now with Joe McCarthy and they're getting pretty close. He'll help the Red Sox.' Actually, Stengel went pale and raced upstairs to report to the Yankee bosses. Maybe it will revive our deal."

CLARK GRIFFITH was talking with McCarthy of the Red Sox, but not on any deal involving Scarborough. McCarthy was attempting to interest him in a straight swap, the Nats' Clyde Vollmer for Tom O'Brien, Red Sox outfielder.

McCarthy, of course, was visioning the right-handed Vollmer as beating a tattoo on their short left field wall for the Red Sox, and attempting to sell Griffith on the merits of O'Brien. "He's a real comer, Griff," said McCarthy. "He can rap that ball, and there isn't a better center fielder than O'Brien in the league outside of Dom DiMaggio."

At that point, Griffith could stand it no longer. He even indulged himself in one of his rare outbursts of profanity. "Who are you trying to fool?" he told McCarthy. "If O'Brien is that good, why the hell aren't the Red Sox using him?"

THE TIGERS' Dick Wakefield is Exhibit A in the swift decline of a baseball player's value. Wakefield is on the market, and when General Manager Billy Evans suggested a deal for him with the White Sox, the Chicago club expressed a dubious interest in the young man Detroit had once paid $52,000 for signing.

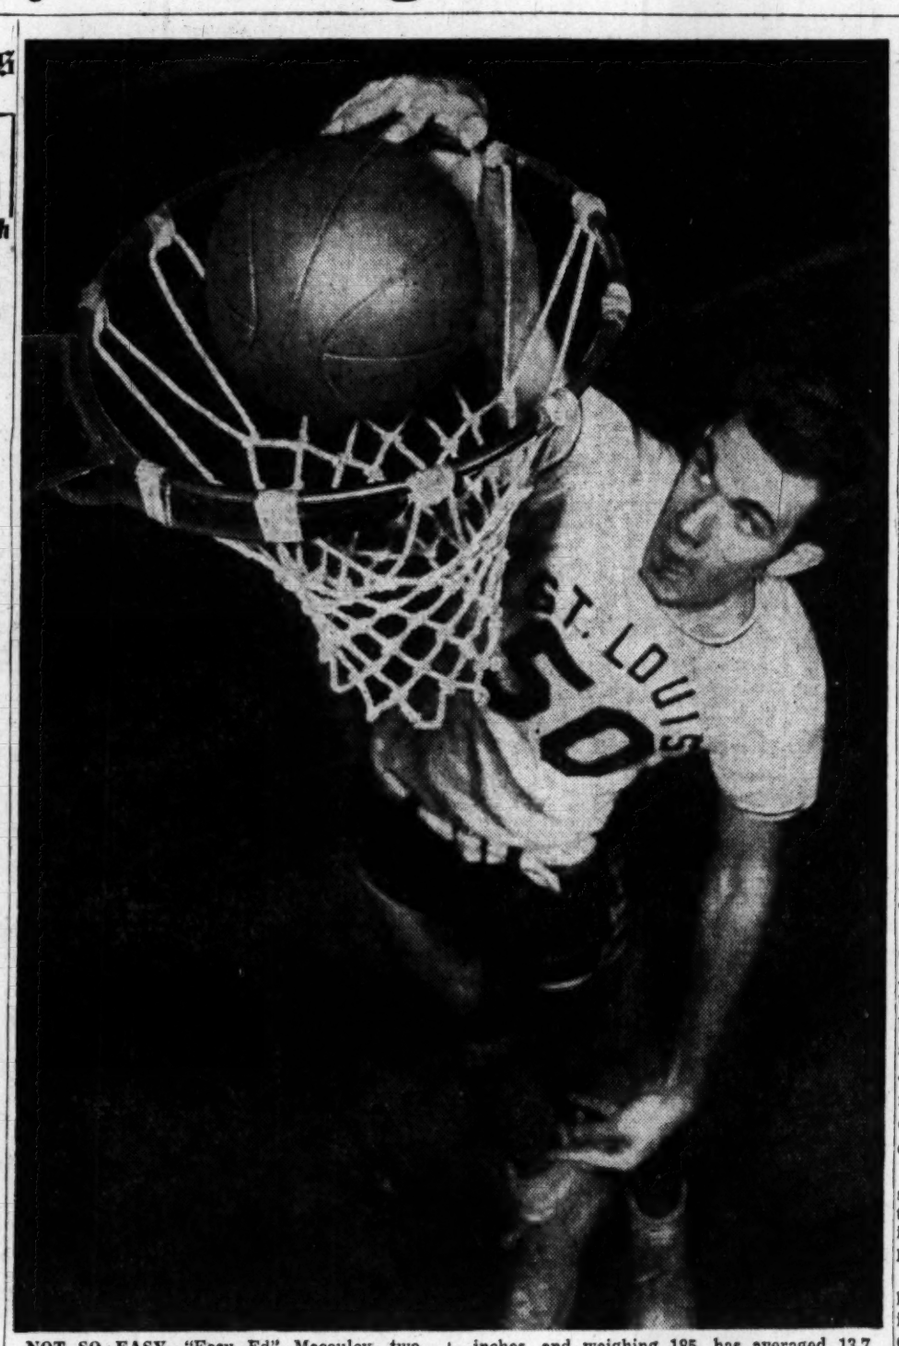
"We'll take Wakefield," said General Manager Frank Lane of Chicago, "and give you Howie Judson for him in an even swap." Judson is the big right-handed pitcher who last year won one game for Chicago, and lost 14.

Well, that was a racy year for Bill Veeck. "I'm retiring from baseball for a year's rest," said Veeck one month ago when he sold out his interest in the Cleveland Indians for a $750,000 profit. This week he's back in New York, hounding the big league meetings for a chance to buy into another club.

LEFTY O'DOUL, manager of the San Francisco Seals, former major league batting champion, and No. 1 baseball personality in the Coast League, is fresh from his good-will tour of Japan. For the last month, the newsreels have been choked with the parades and public receptions for O'Doul and his team in Nippon.

But one photographer covering the baseball meetings apparently is no fan. After snapping O'Doul's picture among a group of baseball men, he asked O'Doul his name. "Lefty O'Doul," said Lefty. "What do you do?" asked the photographer. "Oh," said O'Doul, "I'm a Japanese spy."

Bucky Harris, slightly indignant at the Yankees' demands, is ready to call off all negotiations involving Eddie Robinson. "They won't give us enough for him," says Harris, "so we'll wait. Around May 15, the Red Sox may be so far out in front the Yankees will get panicky, and then they'll try to talk business with us again—on our terms."



NOT SO EASY—"Easy Ed" Macauley, two-time All-American in college ball for St. Louis University, is finding competition in professional ranks not so easy. Macauley, 6 feet, 8 inches, and weighing 185, has averaged 13.7 points per game in his first season with the St. Louis Bombers, who meet Washington's Caps at Uline Arena tonight

Caps Oppose St. Louis Five Here Tonight

A glowing chance to match their longest winning streak of the season—two games—will be enjoyed by the Washington Caps tonight when they entertain the St. Louis Bombers in an 8:30 game at Uline Arena.

The Caps will be facing a team they beat, 81-68, in an earlier encounter and one which will be lacking a pair of its most dependable performers.

Forward John Logan, the Bombers' second-high scorer, and Guard Don Putman were sent back to St. Louis last night with leg injuries.

But "Easy Ed" Macauley again will be in the Bomber lineup. The two-time All-America from St. Louis University is the man most feared by the Caps with his average of 13.7 points per game. He scored 19 points against Washington in the earlier meeting of the clubs and turned in 25 Saturday night as the Bombers were nosed out by Baltimore, 69-66.

Backing the 6-foot-8 pointmaker is Belus Smawley and Red Rocha, although Newcomer Mac Otten may be much in evidence. Other Bomber threats are Ace Maughan, Easy Parham, D. C. Wilcutt, Bill Roberts and Johnny Orr.

In their last outing the Caps took the measure of Fort Wayne, 75-69, to give them a season record of .500 on nine games won and nine lost.

Pierre Wins Again

New York, Dec. 12 (AP).—Pierre Etchebaster, 56-year-old Frenchman, retained his world court tennis championship for the twenty-first year today by defeating Ogden Phipps of the Yale Club, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2, 6—3.

Notre Dame Prexy 'Surprised' By Rumor of Army Renewal

Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, S. J. president of Notre Dame, yesterday said here that he was "quite surprised" over published reports that the Irish and Army will resume football relations within three years.

Father Cavanaugh said he visited Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, last Saturday afternoon before he attended the Gridiron Club dinner here.

"One of General Collins' relatives is a priest at Notre Dame," said Father Cavanaugh, "and we discussed him and other topics, but certainly not the 'resumption' of football relations.

"We just don't negotiate such things at this level," said Father Cavanaugh.

"Besides, a lot of folk have this whole thing mixed up. Army and Notre Dame never severed relations. They were just interrupted, and could be resumed almost any time. When the two schools agree that a resumption would be mutually advantageous, we will play.

"A lot of people want to see Army play Notre Dame, but that doesn't mean that negotiations are going on," concluded the Notre Dame president.

He paid a Sunday visit to Acting President W. D. Carmichael, jr., of North Carolina University in Chapel Hill, N. C., and returned to Washington yesterday for a brief stopover on the way back to South Bend.

Hoyas Face Penn State

The National Guard Armory collegiate basketball season gets under way tonight at 8:45 when Penn State plays undefeated Georgetown.

Four other games involving area teams are also on today's bill:

Virginia vs. Navy at Annapolis, 4 p. m.; Maryland at Pennsylvania, 8 p. m.; Washington College vs. Wilson Teachers at Jefferson Junior High, 8:15 p. m. and Randolph-Macon at Quantico, 8:30 p. m.

Tonight's Hoya game is the opener of the two-day Penn State invasion of Washington. The Nittany Lions, conquerors of Susquehanna, 74-44, in their only start, meet American University tomorrow night at Uline.

They are co-captained by 6-foot 6-inch Center Marty Costa and 5-foot 7-inch Guard Joe Tossi. Both are veterans of last year's two-game series with the Hoyas. G. U. beat the Lions here, 49-41, and lost to them at State College, Pa., 61-42.

Georgetown, led by Tommy O'Keefe and John Brown, who are averiging 17 and 16 points, is shooting for its fourth victory. Its previous victims have been Catholic U., American U., and New York Athletic Club.

Virginia matches its 4-1 record against Navy this afternoon. The Cavaliers are banking on 6-foot 2-inch Joe Noertker, the Nation's No. 2 scorer last year.

The Maryland-Penn game is the opening attraction of a doubleheader at Penn's Palestra. Villanova and Tampa meet in the nightcap. After losing its first three games, Maryland beat Washington and Lee last Saturday. Penn lost its last start to Yale.

Boom on for Terp Coach

Tatum 'Interested' In Florida U. Post

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Maryland Football Coach Jim Tatum last night told The Washington Post he would be interested in coaching at the University of Florida if Florida was interested in him.

Speaking from Jacksonville, Fla., where he addressed a quarterback club, Tatum said:

"If another January 2 (Editor's note: The date of the Maryland-Missouri Gator Bowl game in Jacksonville) Florida hasn't hired a football coach and is interested in me, I am interested in Florida. Right now, however, I have a job at Maryland; I'm happy there; but if an opportunity arose to better myself it would be only natural for me to be interested in it."

Florida recently offered Red Sanders, UCLA coach, a contract calling for $15,000 annually to become football coach and athletic director. Sanders rejected the offer. It is believed Tatum receives $13,000 at Maryland.

D. K. Stanley, dean of physical education of Florida and the man who will recommend a successor to Ray Wolf, whom Florida fired three weeks ago, said Tatum had made no application for the job.

Many Applicants

"We have many applications," Stanley said from Gainesville, Fla., "but Tatum's is not among those. That doesn't mean, however, that we aren't interested in Tatum. Florida is interested in anyone who is known as a good football coach and a gentleman. I know Jim and he qualifies on both counts."

While Tatum tries to remain discreet about a possible switch in jobs, The Washington Post learned that there is a Tatum-for-Florida boom in Jacksonville. One of his strongest boosters is Ely Fink, Jacksonville attorney who is a members of the university's board of control, which must approve any coach the university recommends.

Another Tatum booster in Jacksonville is Walter McRae, who until recently was chairman of Florida's alumni athletic committee.

Interested Before

This is the second time Tatum has professed an interest in Florida. In 1945, shortly after he was discharged from the Navy, he made application for the job left vacant by the dismissal of Tom Lieb.

Wolf, who coached Tatum at North Carolina, was given the job, and Tatum later became head coach at Oklahoma. He was with the Sooners only one year—1946—when he won 7 and lost 2. He switched to Maryland in 1947 and his teams have won 21 games and lost seven in his three-year tenure.

He has made rapid strides at Maryland. His 1947 club went to the Gator Bowl and this year's team, which lost only to Michigan State, is also Gator Bowl bound. Chiefly because of Tatum, Maryland is completing work on a 38,000-capacity stadium which will be ready in the fall to house such attractions as Navy and Michigan State.

Left Sooners

Only two nights ago Tatum told the Washington "M" club that the 1950 Maryland football team "should be the best I've ever coached."

It's difficult to imagine Tatum leaving the setup he enjoys at Maryland, but the big North Carolinian walked out on another good football team in 1946 at Oklahoma. The Sooners, using most of the talent Tatum brought to Oklahoma, are making their second Sugar Bowl trip since Tatum's departure.

Nats Resume Trade Talk With Yanks

New York, Dec. 13.—The Nats and Yankees suddenly resumed trade negotiations at a late hour tonight.

Clark Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris, of the Nats, went into a huddle with Yankee officials at Griffith's hotel near midnight. Reportedly, the Yankees are expanding their offer for Nat First Baseman Eddie Robinson.

New York, Dec. 13.—The Nats had the flat offer of a deal with the Detroit Tigers today—Pitcher Dizzy Trout for Outfielder Gil Coan—and turned it down just as flatly.

Despite Manager Bucky Harris' search for relief pitching strength, as represented by Trout, Owner Clark Griffith vetoed the trade. "I'm not yet ready to give up on Coan," he said.

Griffith is hopeful that Harris can straighten out the complexes of Coan, he said. "Coan has everything with which to be a great ball player except that confidence at the plate. Maybe Bucky can help him. He knows how to deal with young players."

Trout, Rolfe Disagree

Trout's "availability" stems from the veteran pitcher's conflict with Detroit Manager Red Rolfe. The huge righthander is miffed because Rolfe won't consider him a starting pitcher. The Tigers will doubtless make him a figure in any deal they complete.

The Washington-Yankee negotiations bogged down almost completely today in a short session between Griffith and Yankee General Manager George Weiss.

"At the end of their talks, Griffith was indignant. "They make me mad," he said, referring to the Yankees. "They think they can steal a solid ball player like Robinson from us for a lot of their surplus stuff who aren't regulars."

Would Trade Stirnweiss

The chief obstacle in the deal, however, continued to be Bucky Harris' demand for Dick Kryhoski, Yankee first baseman. "They're trying to palm Joe Collins off on us, besides a lot of other Yankees that I know as much about as they do. We won't buy their deal."

Harris admitted that George Stirnweiss was not the chief consideration in a Yankee deal. He believes that such pitchers as Duane Pillette and Don Johnson, offered by the Yanks, could help the Nats.

"Sure, we might trade Stirnweiss off to the Tigers for Dick Wakefield and Trout, if we completed a trade with the Yankees," he said. SHIRLEY POVICH.

Browns Get 4 Players In Addition To Money

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, Dec. 13.—The St. Louis Browns, biggest traders in baseball, tonight completed the biggest trade of the major league meeting so far.

The sold heavy-hitting Third Baseman Bob Dillinger and Outfielder Paul Lehner to the Philadelphia Athletics for $100,000 and four players.

The deal, which was announced at 11:30 p. m. by Bill DeWitt, president of the Browns, was consummated at a night club dinner for major league owners given by Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

To the Browns, in addition to the $100,000, went Veteran Infielder Frankie Gustine, Rookie Shortstop Billy DeMars and Outfielders Ray Coleman and Rocco Ippolitto.

Hit .324 Last Season

The 31-year-old, bespectacled Dillinger batted .324 for the seventh-place Browns last season and, in addition led the league in stolen bases for the third straight season with 20. He is a right-handed batter and was used as lead-off hitter by the Brownies.

He has been with the Browns for four years, coming up from Toledo of the American Association.

Sought by practically every club in the American League, Dillinger, along with 12 other Browns over 28 year old, was placed on the block by the St. Louis club owners two months ago.

Lehner, 29 years old, also has been with the Browns four years. He began his career with Toledo in 1946. He is a left-handed batter and thrower. The Browns used him at first base and in the outfield. The A's will probably use him in right field.

Gustine Bought Last Fall

Gustine, a former Pittsburgh and Chicago Cub third baseman, was bought by the A's last fall from the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League. He batted .290 with the Angels.

DeMars, rated the second best shortstop in the International League, batted .275 for Buffalo. He is 23 years old.

Coleman is a former Brownie who was traded to the Athletics for George Binks and $20,000 two years ago. He returns to the majors after hitting .320 with Buffalo last season.

Ippolitto, a 21-year-old right-handed hitting outfielder, also batted .320 and banged 23 home runs for Lincoln, Nebr., of the Class-A Western League.

Cubs Get Bill Voiselle

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—The Boston Braves broke the trading deadlock at the winter baseball meeting wide open today with two deals, one of them sending pitcher Bill Voiselle to the Chicago Cubs for infielder Gene Mauch and unspecified cash.

The Braves also sold Outfielder Marv Rickert to the Pittsburgh Pirates for an unannounced minor leaguer and a cash sum "in excess of $10,000."

Voiselle won seven games and lost eight for the Braves last year. He is a 30-year-old righthander who came to the majors with the New York Giants in 1942.

He won 21 games with the Giants in 1944 and dropped below the .500 mark for the next two seasons. He went to the Braves during the 1947 season. Rickert batted .292 last season.

Okla. Aggies Beaten by LIU

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—Long Island's towering Blackbirds defeated Oklahoma A. and M. tonight in a weird, rough game of basketball, 38-31, before an estimated crowd of 12,000 in Madison Square Garden. Colgate won the opener over New York University with a thrilling second half drive, 83-78.

Longden Accepts Challenge of Woman Jockey

Agua, Caliente, Mexico, Dec. 13 (AP).—A woman will match her horse race riding skill against Johnny Longden, America's leading jockey, here Sunday.

The woman is Mrs. Wantha Davis of Arizona, a native of Liberal, Kans., and mother of a 9-year-old son.

Walter C. Marty, general manager of the Caliente track, said Longden had sent an acceptance for the match race through George W. Schilling, presiding steward at Caliente and Tanforan, Calif.

Buffalo Launches Frantic Bid for Pro Grid Berth

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 13 (AP).—Citizens of Buffalo stormed Memorial Auditorium tonight to buy interests in what they hoped would be a franchise in the National-American Football League.

A rally aimed at buying the Buffalo Bills back into profootball started at 5 p. m. several hours later approximately $50,000 had been raised and the figure was mounting.

Most of the fans were buying $5 and $10 subscriptions. The first 2000 subscription blanks disappeared fast and two additional sets of 4000 each were ordered.

A group of 43 men worked in relays at receiving desks. The group hopes to raise at least $250,000 and, if possible, $500,000.

Buffalo lost its All-America Conference franchise in the recent league merger.

Fort Myer Wins, 78-66; Stoll Stars

Ken Stoll scored 39 points to pace Fort Myer to a 78-66 win over Military Air Transport in a Military District of Washington game last night at Fort Myer.

In a preliminary game, the Fort Myer Wacs defeated the Fort Meadez Wacs, 30-7.

'It's Taking Foot Out of Football'

Coaches Shout, 'Down With Sub Rule'

(This is the second in a series of three articles on college football rules and trends.)

By Irving T. Marsh
New York Herald Tribune Writer

THE coaches of the Nation's college football teams do not like the present substitution rule. Of the almost four hundred coaches who answered the Herald Tribune's questionnaire on the 1949 football playing code, 62 percent felt that the rule should be changed, 32 percent were in favor of it (although a good many had minor reservations) and the rest either wanted more time to decide or had major reservations.

"Give the quarterbacking job back to the quarterback"

The question asked:

"Are you in favor of the present substitution rule?"

(The rule, in brief, permits unlimited substitutions when the clock is dead or when the ball has changed hands. A substitution made when the clock is running costs the substituting team 5 yards. That is the penalty which originally was called "delay of the game," but which now is being announced as "illegal substitution.")

Here is a breakdown of the answers (colleges in major conferences and the independents who play major schedules is being listed under "big" and those in minor conferences and small independents under "small"):

	Big	Small	Tot.	Pct.
No	47	177	224	62
Yes	20	97	117	32
Yes with reservations	1	11	12	3
Need more time	0	9	9	3
Totals ...	68	294	362	100

The comments from the antis ran from downright disapproval to suggestions for the betterment of the rule.

THE men who opposed it most vigorously thought, as one said: "It is ridiculous not to be able to get a punter in or get an injured player out without taking a penalty." There were dozens who held this option in language ranging from mild complaint to "this is the worst rule they have thought up in years."

Almost 50 of them definitely preferred the 1948 rule, in which one man could be substituted while the clock was running and an unlimited number when the clock was dead. All of these asked that the rules committe go back to this.

Several suggested the substitution of two, three, or even four men without penalty. Others would have two or more men enter at any time so long as they get into action before 25 seconds is up (the pro rule). Others, two substitutions at any time (the high school federation rule).

Some suggested that the game go back to the code of the early 1940's when a player could re-enter once each quarter. One advocate of this rule added, a little petulantly perhaps:

"We don't change baseball rules every year and it has still remained a pretty good American game."

BUT most of them didn't like the present rule at all and had no hesitation in saying why. For example:

"Let's keep a bit of the foot in football"

"The lack of opportunity to send in a man between each down for kicking, passing, receiving, etc., makes for conservative football."

"It is too difficult to admin-

Racer Has Speed For Everything Except His Wedding

Miami, Fla., Dec. 13 (AP).—Bill Holland, 40, winner of the 500-mile Indianapolis race last Memorial Day, was 25 minutes late to his own wedding yesterday.

A headwind delayed his plane on the flight from Tampa.

The four o'clock ceremony did not get under way until 4:20 p. m. but after that everything went according to schedule.

Holland married Ruth Dannie Asmussen, 22, of Detroit in the patio of the Plymouth Congregational Church in Coconut Grove. The Rev. David J. Davis performed the ceremony.

Favorite Pays Mutuel Of $4.80

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 13.—After being second in six of his last seven starts, Mrs. J. M. Lingle's Cinder Foot renewed acquaintance with the winner's circle here today. Apprentice Johnny Regalbuto brought the son of Sky Raider along in time to win by two lengths and threw mud, not cinders, in the eyes of Robert Vitb's Carolina Star and H. M. Simpson's Certified.

Performing on a sloppy track, Cinder Foot operated in the interests of the favorite players in a crowd of 5500 and returned a $4.80 mutuel. He was clocked for the 120 feet more than 6 furlongs in 1:18 3/5.

Cinder Foot has been one of the season's most consistent performers having been to the post 29 times, winning 7, finishing second in 9 and third in 4—20-in-the-money outings.

Highland Farm's High Hunch, beaten a snozzle at 53-1 last week, had better luck today, taking a photo finish and causing a $42.20 mutuel to be displaced. Apprentice J. McDermott was on the winner and once again Dick Lawless was aboard the second horse, this time Mrs. Thomas Helm's Batchfly, a heavily-backed favorite.

In the fifth race, the day's secondary feature, the combination of the Lingle Stable and Apprentice Regalbuto clicked.

AT CHARLES TOWN

DEAR FOLKS: Beetlebomb was a winner on the Tuesday program. However, he failed to run according to the famous Spike Jones record in which he comes from last place. The real Beetlebomb went to the front and stayed there. Starter Harold Holland, after a conference with President Al J. Boyle, announced that daily schooling would begin here on February 15 from 12:30 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. for horses preparing for the 1950 opening on March 4. In addition to putting horses through starting gate manners, Holland plans to stage a couple of races each afternoon—no betting or purses, of course. Owners and trainers of several hundred horses already have announced they would winter here and await the early March action.—BILL.

Eastern Five Upset, 50-36, By Priory

Coaches Shout, 'Down With Substitute Rule'

ister and places unnecessary pressure on officials."

"I can't get a man in to win his letter."

"Whole units of specialists are sent in, but every time a punter is sent in it costs a team 5 yards. "Let's keep a bit of the foot in football."

"It is not consistent with the two-platoon system."

"Let's go back to the system used when coaches as well as spectators know who is in the game."

"It has really hurt and won't do football any good."

"The present substitution rule is a vicious one and needs compete revision."

WITHOUT trying to prejudice the case, it would seem that those who were in favor of the current rule were not too vociferous in their support of it. Those in favor mentioned most frequently that they like it because there was less chance for the coach to call the game from the sidelines by sending in a substitute on every play. Said one:

"It has given the quarterback job back to the quarterback."

Other reasons:

"It helps keep the game moving."

"It makes for a more interesting game, a more advanced style of play, a better all-around exhibition."

"Substitutions now are an organization system."

One coach had some advice for the men who write the game:

"If the sports writers," he said, "would adjust their reportorial methods to fit the new game rather than try to report the game with antiquated methods they wouldn't be doing all this squawking."

Even some of those who favored the rule declared they would like to see either a punter or a passer substituted while the clock was running without penalty. Some declared that the rule could be helped by allowing one substitution on fourth down.

At any rate, there seems to be general dissatisfaction with the rule as it now stands. That is the one conclusion it is safe to draw from the survey.

Baugh Wins Passing Title For 6th Time in 13 Years

Slingin' Sammy Baugh couldn't push the Washington Redskins any higher than fourth place in the Eastern Division of the National Football League in 1949, but he was the champion in his own department.

For the sixth time in his 13 years of pro football, the lanky Texan won the league aerial title, according to final statistics.

He nosed out Johnny Lujack, Chicago Bear ace, by the narrow margin of two points in the loop's system of inverse grading. Tommy Thompson of the Philadelphia Eagles, last year's winner, was third and trailing in order were Los Angeles' Bob Waterfield and the New York Giants' Chuck Conerly.

In the rushing department Steve Van Buren of the Eagles took honors for the third successive year, breaking his own season record of 1008 yards with 1146 yards in 163 attempts.

A bitter development for the Redskins was the fact that Bob Nussbaumer, the halfback they traded to the Chicago Cardinals after the 1948 season, wound up with the pass interception championship. Nussbaumer snagged 12 of the opposition's tosses while none of the Redskins could catch as many as 6.

One Survivor Of Airliner Crash Still Unconscious

Arlington Man's Condition Critical, With Two Others Listed as Serious

Most of the 19 survivors of the Capital Airlines crash which killed four near National Airport Monday night were listed in good condition last night.

Only person classified as critical was George C. Harrison, 47, of 5921 N. 16th st., Arlington, who suffered multiple fractures of left ribs, compound fracture of the right hand, internal injuries and severe shock.

He was still unconscious last night at Bolling Air Force Base Hospital and was being given continuous blood transfusions.

Two others were reported in serious condition, four as fair, and 12 good.

DEAD

Capt. William J. Davis, 45, of 209 Belle View blvd., Alexandria. Pilot of the plane, Davis was one of the company's oldest employes in point of service. He came up through the ranks, starting in 1932 as service man with Pennsylvania Airlines—one of Capital's predecessors.

He worked as dispatcher, station manager in Grand Rapids, Mich., and divisional superintendent. In 1942 he was a ground school instructor at Capital's military air transport training school at Roanoke, Va.

In 1943 he took pilot's training himself and became a captain in 1945. He had 6557 hours of flying time. A native of Olive Hill, Ky., he is survived by his wife and son.

Copilot Lloyd L. Porter, 28, of 190 Farmington dr., Alexandria, had flown for Capital since October, 1945. A native of Warren, Pa., he flew with the Army Air Forces during the war in Africa and the Mediterranean theaters. He had 6565 flying hours to his credit. He is survived by his wife and 3-year-old son, Ross, who hasn't been told yet that his daddy isn't coming home.

Neville Lassiter, 40, of 2310 S. Columbia st., Arlington, a traffic and transportation specialist for the Strategic and Critical Materials Branch of Federal supply service in the General Service Administration.

Born in Portsmouth, Va., Lassiter worked for the Seaboard Air Line Railroad Co. before the war, served during the war as a Marine warrant officer specializing in transportation. He had been with the Federal Supply Service for 2½ years. He is survived by his wife.

Mrs. William Chertow, about 50, of Brooklyn, N. Y. She was on the plane, it was reported, only because of a last-minute change in flight plans. Returning from Norfolk, where she had attended the unveiling of her brother's tombstone, she switched from a flight direct to New York because of bad fog conditions there.

SURVIVORS

Survivors: (Unless otherwise listed, survivors are at Bolling Air Force Base Hospital.)

George C. Harrison is also employed by the Federal Supply Service as a buyer of strategic and critical materials. A native of Manchester, Conn., he has worked for the Government here since 1934, with the Commodity Credit Corp., Reconstruction Finance Corp., and since 1948 in his present position.

Joseph W. Buell, 23, of 5711 3d pl. nw., flight attendant on the plane. A football star at McKinley High School (Class of 1945), he served 18 months in the Air Force, and as a freshman in 1946 was a first-string back on George Washington University's varsity football team.

He left school for a year and returned in 1948 to play second string to Andy Davis. That year he was named Mr. Apollo in a campus male beauty contest. He has worked for Capital Airlines since last summer. He was reported in good condition, suffering from cuts and bruises.

William L. Stevens, 31, of 4514 S. 36th st., Arlington, reported in good condition at Doctors Hospital with a fractured jaw. An industrial engineer with the Navy Department's Bureau of Ships, Stevens is a native of Detroit and a graduate of the University of Michigan. He is married, has no children.

Henry Grimes, 38, of Monrovia, Liberia. Assistant manager of the Liberian government radio station in Monrovia, Grimes is in this country on a special mission for his government. He is a son of the late Chief Justice L. A. Grimes of Liberia's Supreme Court. Grimes was said to be in good condition with a cerebral concussion and multiple cuts.

Jeff C. Buchanan, 25, USN, Laurel, Miss., in good condition at Bethesda Naval Hospital with cuts and bruises.

Survivors Tell Crash Stories Amid Disinfectant, Prayers

The sharp odor of disinfectant . . . a parade of worried faces . . . the soft prayers of a chaplain . . . the "God, I'm lucky-to-be-alive" stories of some.

This was the atmosphere yesterday in the crash ward at Bolling Air Force Base where 19 injured persons were taken Monday night after the crash of a Capital Airlines DC-3 in the Potomac River.

During the day 10 of the injured were transferred to other hospitals.

One of those who remained was George C. Harrison, 47, of 5921 North 16th st., Arlington, Va., Bureau of Federal Supply purchasing agent.

Still in Coma

He was still in a coma. "He's in a severe state of shock," said an orderly who lingered by Harrison's bed.

Physicians listed Harrison's condition as "very critical." He suffered multiple fractures of the left ribs and a compound fracture of the right foot.

A curtain on rollers shielded Harrison's bed from view. The injured man's wife and 16-year-old daughter stood by the bedside, waiting and watching.

Maj. Albert Karnell, Protestant chaplain at Bolling, went to them and tried to comfort them. He said a brief prayer at the foot of the bed.

"When I spoke to him," said Mrs. Harrison, "even in his subconscious mind he groaned and tried to say he knew me."

Man Criticizes Landing

Elsewhere in the ward was Howard E. Oakes, 35, of Bronxville, N. Y., a regional merchandiser for Montgomery Ward & Co. He suffered cuts on the face and scalp but is in good condition.

"I can't help but believe that the crash was due to negligence," said Oakes, who boarded the plane at Raleigh, N. C.

"The pilot made a rough landing in Newport News, Va. You always think the next one will be okay so I didn't think anything about it.

"I was sitting on the left side of the plane when I noticed that the pilot gave it the gun.

"I believe the wing may have hit the ground when the plane turned on its side, but it went straight into the ground.

"I was caught on my hands and knees inside the plane. The whole opposite side of the plane was knocked out.

"I noticed my leg was bad and I couldn't move about too much."

Praises Rescuers

Referring to the Navy personnel who were passengers on the plane, Oakes said, "Those Navy kids did a wonderful job pulling people out of the plane."

Henry Grimes, 38, of Monrovia, Liberia, on a government mission to the Liberian Legation here, was recovering from multiple head lacerations and concussion.

"We were coming in slowly," he said, "when the plane started dropping very fast. At first I did not know whether we were landing or not.

"Then I said, 'This is not a landing; something's gone wrong.' I then made a sign of the cross and sort of braced myself for it, but when we actually crashed I climbed out the side because I wasn't too far from the door on the right. I was resting on something solid when they picked me up."

Dozing in a nearby bed was Conrad Johnson, jr., 28-year-old New York architect, who suffered head cuts. He is in good condition.

His father and mother were by his bed. His father said the young man piloted a P-47 fighter in the European theater for two years during World War II and won several decorations.

The father said his son told him the plane seemed about to land once.

"He thought the radar and radio had gone out," said the father. "He said the plane shot back up and the pilot seemed to be trying a forced landing when he went into a dive."

The father quoted his son as saying:

"I was sitting over a wing because I think it's the best place to sit. I was the first one out of the plane. I walked onto the wing and got to the ambulance under my own power."

craft bound for Washington were holding as far out as Front Royal, Va., and Martinsburg, W. Va.

Despite the extra load of New York traffic, Stern said it was a normal bad weather night at the airport. A total of 95 aircraft were brought into National Airport on instruments in the 20-hour period from midnight Sunday to the time of the crash, he said.

The DC-3 held for another 15 minutes with five other planes in the Clifton stack at the intersection of the Washington and Quantico radio ranges. Stacks are designated patterns in which planes circle while awaiting landing during heavy traffic.

At 8:01 p. m., the plane was cleared into the two Mount Vernon stacks in which no more than eight planes were permitted at one time. It remained there for 36 minutes.

Approached at 8:37

The Capital Airliner began its final approach to runway 36 at 8:37 p. m., using its ILS equipment for the approach. At that time, there was three-fourths of a mile of visibility and a ceiling of 400 feet. National Airport shuts out traffic when the visibility drops below a half-mile and the ceiling below 400 feet.

With the ILS equipment, a pilot flies down a pathway marked out by ground radio beams. When a plane is "in the groove," two indicators in the cockpit will cross perpendicularly to show that the plane is on the course both vertically and horizontally.

The indicators swing either up or down, or from side to side when a plane veers off the correct path, and indicate which way correction should be made.

Besides the ILS, airport radar crews tracked the Capital Airliner down on ground control approach radar scopes.

Never Sought Radar

Capital Airlines, the CAA says, has never asked to use ground control radar landing aids, preferring the ILS equipment.

In the final approach, two radar screens are used. One sweeps a narrow vertical band in which ground controllers note the position of the landing plane with respect to the ideal vertical path. A wider horizontal band indicates to radar men the plane's horizontal position. Ground technicians continually advise pilots of their relative positions.

When pilots are landing with ILS, the GCA radar is used as a monitor and pilots are contacted only when emergencies are imminent.

After making a perfect approach for 3½ miles, officials say, the DC-3 drifted off course to the right about 7000 feet from the end of the runway.

At 8:40 the plane went completely off the horizontal scope, indicating to radarmen that it was at least 1500 feet to the right of the runway.

A minute later, after it had been warned by radio of its position, the plane momentarily appeared on the screen again, indicating that it was trying to correct, then disappeared completely. At 8:44, the tower warned neighboring airports that it had lost a plane.

Officials could give no reason why the pilot allowed the transport to drift so far off course. Faulty ILS equipment was suggested as one possible but as yet unconfirmable reason.

One official observer said the pilot may have inadvertently drifted off while changing his procedure from instrument to visual flight as he was breaking through the cloud layer.

A member of the Bolling Air Force Base crash crew witnessed the airliner's plunge, and rescue boats groped through the fog to the scene before National Airport was definitely aware that the plane had crashed.

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, yesterday visited Bolling's unique crash ward, to which the 19 survivors were rushed.

"I think it's a fine tribute to Maj. Howard R. Lawrence, the ward's designer, and the medical establishment that they were able to do as fine a job as they did," the general said.

"I think the fact that these facilities were available," he added, "was responsible for keeping casualties down."

CAB investigators impounded the recordings of eight radio towers with which the crashed plane was in contact, and immediately began transcribing them for any possible clews.

The CAB staff is still sifting evidence on the midair collision at National Airport November 1 in which 55 were killed and has part of its staff investigating a recent DC-6 crash in Dallas, Tex. For these reasons public hearings won't be held for at least 10 days.

Buell said there had been no indication of engine troubles until the accident occurred.

"It all happened in a split second," he said, "the next thing I knew I was standing up on the wing of the plane."

"The whole left side of the plane was gone," Buell recalls, "I think I pulled a couple of others out."

Slayer of Wife Freed as Insane At Time of Act

Robertson Also Acquitted by Jury After 3½ Hours in Marine's Wounding

Clarence W. Robertson, 35, was acquitted yesterday by reason of temporary insanity in his trial for the second-degree love-murder of his wife.

The jury delberated 3½ hours before returning the not guilty verdict to Judge James R. Kirkland in District Court. The jury also found Robertson was temporarily insane when, after fatally shooting his wife, Lizzie Lucille Robertson, 24, he shot and wounded her marine friend, Pfc. Everett Flagg.

Asked by reporters for comment on the verdict, Robertson said calmly:

"I was surprised in a way. The jury could have found either way. I am now going back to North Carolina to seek employment. I will take my son, Dennis, with me."

The trial was climaxed by the testimony of four psychiatrists. Three of them testified Robertson became deranged as the result of a feeling that his wife was unfaithful to him. The fourth said Robertson was sane when the shootings occurred last March. All agreed he is now of sound mind.

Robertson, a North Carolina farmhand who was in the Army during the war and then came to Washington, married his wife six years ago. Later they became estranged and she kept their 2-year-old boy. The father lived next door to the mother so he could see the child.

A neighbor testified Mrs. Robertson said she hoped to drive her husband to suicide. She kissed the marine in public, according to testimony, and taunted her husband about it.

Robertson said he found a handkerchief evidencing his wife's extramarital lovemaking and then became overwrought. He shot the pair in Mrs. Robertson's apartment.

The defendant said he believed his wife had committed adultery before the eyes of the child.

"Children's Hour" Recited

Defense Attorneys James J. Laughlin, T. P. Gholson and H. W. Gholson, jr., argued that Robertson shot his wife when she threw herself in front of Flagg, and that Robertson never ceased to love her.

Laughlin, in his final argument, recited a stanza of "The Children's Hour" and quoted from the Bible.

He said Robertson was driven to his deed because of his devotion to the little boy and always hoped that there would some day be a reconciliation.

After he shot his wife, Robertson kissed her as she lay dying.

Assistant United States Attorney Grace Stiles described the defendant as a "jealous husband with a heart filled with malice who killed his wife because she wouldn't live with him."

Smile Is Give-away

Stolen Dates Get 8 Boys Police Dates

A smile on the face of a 14-year-old boy linked seven of his companions to the theft—mysterious in its way—of more than 300 pounds of dates.

This is the way police tell it:

The dates, a quarter of a boxcar of them, were consigned to William M. Richardson and his daughter, Mrs. Amelia Holland, of 473 Valley pl. se., from their date farm in California to be sold here.

Given Taste of Delicacy

Last December 5, Mrs. Holland went to the railroad siding at Howard rd. and Firth Sterling ave. se., to inspect the shipment. Some neighborhood youngsters gathered around. Mrs. Holland gave them a taste of the delicacy.

That night, between 6 and 8 p. m., the boxcar was broken into, and 76 boxes—301 pounds worth $132.50—were taken.

The only clews were the broken boxcar lock and a crowbar.

The FBI stepped in, so did Eleventh Precinct Detective Frank L. Reinhardt. There wasn't much to go on. The FBI soon stepped out of the case—they decided, after all, that it wasn't a theft in interstate commerce—so Reinhardt began questioning youngsters.

School Broken Into, Rifled

Results—poor. But about this time, the Turner School, Alabama ave. and Staunton rd. se., was broken into and rifled.

Reinhardt thought the two cases might be connected and called one youngster into the station house.

As the boy was questioned, he saw a box that contained the kind of dates that were stolen. The kid sort of snickered—the case was broken.

Boy Mentions Pals

Questioned, the 14-year-old boy mentioned some pals.

The pals—aged from 13 to 17—confessed to the detective Monday night, and yesterday juvenile papers were filed for them on housebreaking charges.

The dates?

They must have been good: Police said only 6 pounds of the pilfered 301 were recovered.

3 Teenagers Held in Thefts Of 7 Autos

Three teen-age boys, all with a penchant for 1949 Fords, admitted to police yesterday they stole seven of them for joyrides Sunday night and early Monday.

Police said they were looking for a fourth member of the gang.

The juveniles—14, 15 and 16 years old—said all the cars were taken in the Southeast area, according to police.

The 14-year-old boy, in addition, admitted six recent housebreakings in the section.

The boys said they would "race around" in a stolen car until they got tired of it. Then they would abandon it and take another.

On one excursion Sunday night, they sideswiped the cab of Joseph V. Heller, which was parked outside his home, 605 31st st. se. Before the stolen car spree, they said, they fired shots—with a stolen gun—into a Safeway store in Bladensburg, but couldn't remember exactly where or when.

It was the youngest boy who led to the trio's arrest, police said.

Answering a call for disorderly boys on Bowen rd. se., Monday night, officers recognized the 14-year-old as a runaway, missing since Sunday. To police, he "looked like he'd been in trouble."

After a session with Fourteenth Precinct police the trio was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Sailor, 18, Held On Rape Charge Of Vienna Girl, 14

Robert L. Lawson, 18, a sailor, was charged last night by Fairfax County police with the rape of a 14-year-old Fairfax High School student.

Both Lawson and the girl are of Vienna, Va. The sailor, police said, was home on leave from the Patuxent River Naval Base.

Police said the girl, who knew Lawson, told them she joined the sailor in his car yesterday after school, was driven to Hunter's Mill rd., about 10 miles west of Vienna, where he attacked her. The girl finally escaped, nude, and fled to a nearby home.

Lawson, picked up within an hour, was held in $5000 bond for appearance December 21 in trial magistrate's court at Fairfax.

Grant Now Doubts Wisdom of Dupont Circle Underpass

Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant now doubts the wisdom of the Dupont Circle underpass, plans for which he approved when he was chairman of the National Capital Park and Planing Commission.

Addressing a Keystone Automobile Club dinner at the Shoreham Hotel, General Grant said: "Perhaps it shouldn't have been built on Connecticut ave.—perhaps it would have been better to favor Massachusetts ave."

Later he explained to a reporter he meant the underpass perhaps should have been built at the circle for autos on Massachusetts ave. instead of streetcars on Connecticut ave.

His reason: "Connecticut is nearing the saturation point of development, whereas Massachusetts west of Wisconsin is hardly developed at all."

C. Melvin Sharpe was elected chairman of the club's advisory board and J. Randall Caton vice chairman. The club elected General Grant to membership.

Truck Rips Into Shed In Plunge Off Bridge

John Fortune was a fortunate fellow indeed that he wasn't hurt worse last night when his truck plunged off the 11th st. se. bridge.

Fortune, 33, of 512 S. Patrick st., Alexandria, was taken to Casualty Hospital where he was treated for a head injury that was not considered serious. Later he was transferred to Gallinger Hospital.

Apparently the truck hit the curbing on the west side of the bridge, then careened over sharply to the left and through the guard railing.

The truck did a flip and crashed down about 30 feet top first. As it fell it ripped through part of the roof and side of a garage used by the United States Engineers.

Optical Man Admits He Was Hit-Run Driver

Struck by a hit-run auto admittedly driven by the vice president of a large Washington optical firm, Miss Mary Price, 40, of 1875 Mintwood pl. nw., was in critical condition at Emergency Hospital yesterday with head injuries.

Bond for the driver, Lewis A. Bond, 49, of 2701 Connecticut ave. nw., was continued at $1000 yesterday when the case failed to come up in Municipal Court. Bond listed himself as vice president of the Edmonds Optical Co., 915 15th st. nw.

He admitted, according to police, that his car struck Miss Price on Calvert st. near Cliffbourne pl. nw. Monday night.

He was arrested Monday night after Aubrey Cole, 1524 Quarles st. ne., operator of a streetcar near the scene, gave police the license number of the hit-run car.

'Ole' Heralds New Dancer From Spain

By Paul Hume

Shouts of "Ole" heralded the coming of a new Spanish dancer to Constitution Hall last night.

Mariemma and her compact company of two dancers, a pianist, and a guitarist, filled the hall with shouts of approval as she castanetted her way through a traditional bill of Spanish rhythms.

Costumes changed with every change on the program. The music came from some of Spain's great musicians, including Isaac Albeniz and Manuel de Falla.

Between dances, Enrique Luzuriaga played piano solos with the kind of inflection needed to make the music stand forth as the great mirror of Spanish art that it is.

Paca de la Isla was the virtuoso guitar player. The tireless beat of the intricate steps, their infinite variety in a small framework, and the matchless rhythms of bolero, fandango, and the folk measures of Iberia made an evening of constant flashing tempos.

Paco Fernandez and Joaquin Villa were Mariemma's lissome partners. While one admired the technique and the swirl of the scene there grew an inescapable feeling akin to watching tap dancers for too long a time. For those who love Spanish moods and sounds it must have been a demi-Paradise.

Marshall Heights Deadlock Ends Slum Clearance Parleys

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A plan for privately built $5000 homes was offered last night to break the impasse on redevelopment of Marshall Heights.

But it failed to dent the opposition of Marshall Heights residents to choice of their area as the first proposed postwar slum clearance project in Washington.

On this note of deadlock, Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) closed for the present his conferences with Washington officials and citizens on housing and slum clearance problems.

"A lot more missionary work must be done to dispel this distrust by the people of Marshall Heights," said Sparkman.

He said the proposed $5000 homes seemed to hold but a practical solution for many Marshall Heights residents. He said it would have to be coupled with positive assurance that Marshall Heights home owners can retain their present homes or build or buy new ones in the area.

He has no immediate plan for further action. He said he will not vote for any funds to redevelop Marshall Heights or any other area "until I feel assured the property owners' full rights will be protected." He expressed anew the belief that some satisfactory solution can be found.

An opening step toward further missionary work was forecast by Hillyard Robinson, chairman of the special committee set up by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to coordinate programs of local agencies involved in housing and slum clearance. Robinson said he hopes to arrange a meeting of his group with representatives of Marshall Heights this month for further discussion.

The plan for the $5000 home was presented by John Andrews and Hilda Cloud, of the Washington Housing Association, and its details were given by one of its two authors, Edward R. Carr, former president of both the Washington and the National Association of Homebuilders, representing also the Board of Trade. Carr said he had worked up the plan in cooperation with Clarke Daniel, Washington Home Builders Association vice president. He emphasized it was a minimum house, based on an FHA design.

At $5000, he said, the house could be bought for $37.50 a month on a 25-year 4½ percent loan. He said any competent Washington builder could put it up.

Everett Edmond, president of the Marshall Heights Civic Association, said the house was fine, but it would not change the opposition of his people to the redevelopment project. Other speakers against it were: Howard D. Woodson, civil engineer, employed by the association; Mrs. Patsy L. Allen, of the Marshall Heights Self-Help Cooperative; Mrs. Pauline Ward, Pioners Committee; James C. Johnson, cab driver, and Joel D. Hankins, Public Housing Administration clerk and Ernest L. Harper, Federation of Civic Associations president, speaking also for the Interdenominational Ministers' Alliance and the District Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Others who spoke included Ralph W. Donnelly, Federation of Citizens Associations; Oliver M. Walker, president, Washington Real Estate Board; Mrs. Donald C. Beatty, president, District League of Women Voters; Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, Washington AAUW, and Louis Justement, Washington chapter, American Institute of Architects.

Woman Again Kept From Oath As Citizen, This Time by Fall

Misfortune yesterday continued to follow the attempts of a 65-year-old housewife to become an American citizen.

She is Mrs. Mary Scaldaferri, 501 Decatur st. nw., a native of Italy. For the second consecutive naturalization day, she was unable to go to District Court to take the oath of citizenship.

Woman Percher On Bridge Rail Sent to Hospital

The mother of three children was held for observation at Gallinger Hospital yesterday after she was found perched on the railing of the Porter Street Bridge in Rock Creek Park.

Police said the woman, Mrs. Mary Virginia Pace, 43, of 3506 15th st. ne., was restrained by Mrs. Nathan Weinberg, of 3020 Albemarle st. nw., who was driving over the bridge with her husband.

Mrs. Pace told police she was despondent because of financial and domestic reasons.

2 Escape Injury As Crane Breaks

Two workmen escaped injury yesterday morning when the boom of a crane broke, dropping a ton-and-a-half of wet cement four stories down the elevator shaft of a building under construction at 1731 H st. nw.

One of the man, John Thomas, 37, of Camp Springs, Md., was standing near the shaft on the first floor when the load fell. The second man, unidentified, was nearby.

Soldiers' Home Plan Called Shortsighted

Walter L. Fowler, District budget officer, yesterday called the National Capital Park and Planning Commission "short-sighted" in its plans for Soldiers' Home.

Fowler referred to the NCPPC action last week in declaring Soldiers' Home should be reserved as an "open space," although the commission felt construction of a hospital and other necessary home buildings should be permitted.

Speaking as the District representative on the D. C. Recreation Board, Fowler declared:

"It seems utterly absurd to put a hospital there and leave 400 acres of corn land. This city is land poor right now. We can't afford to let this 500-acre tract be used for corn land forever."

The board also heard Miss Sibyl Baker, chairman of the executive committee of the National Community Christmas Tree, outline plans for this year's observance, to take place on the White House Grounds December 24. The tree is to be lighted at 5 p. m. on Christmas Eve, when Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman will act as master of ceremonies, and President Truman will speak by radio from his Independence, Mo., home.

The board appointed a committee to study the request of the Terrell Junior High School PTA that the playground at First st. and New York ave. nw. "be declared open to all of the children in that neighborhood."

Named as chairman was Mrs. O. G. Hankin. Other members are Mrs. Alice C. Hunter and Harry S. Wender, board chairman.

The playground is now operated for white children. Checks of the community have revealed that it is now largely inhabited by Negro residents, whose children have inadequate play space, it was reported. Mrs. Hunter suggested at the meeting that, as a compromise, the playground might be opened to Terrell pupils during school hours, if it is not feasible to convert it to use by all the children in the neighborhood.

County Asked To Take Over GI Housing

E. Brooke Lee, chairman of the Montgomery County Housing Authority, yesterday asked the county council to take over control of emergency veterans' housing in the county.

Lee pointed out at the council meeting that the Public Housing Administration has stated its intention of disposing of the 199 living units and 15 trailers by January 1, 1951, unless control passes to the county.

The county would realize between $10,000 and $15,000 a year from the housing, Lee declared, basing his estimate on figures covering the past three years. Rentals run from $29.50 to $36 a month, he said.

The temporary housing units are located in Sligo Creek Park, between Colesville and Forest Glen rds., Silver Spring, and on county property at the Lyttonsville incinerator. The trailers are on the campus of the Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, and are occupied by college students.

A decision was deferred by the council pending a study by County Manager Irving G. McNayr and County Attorney David Macdonald.

By a 4-3 vote, the council approved a request for commercial zoning of three residential lots on Ellsworth dr. between Fenton and Cedar, Silver Spring, after unanimously denying a similar petition for five adjacent lots.

An application by Phil D. Poston was approved according to the majority opinion "because it is a logical and reasonable extension to existing commercial zoning and to the Silver Spring zoning plan."

The disallowed petition of Claud Livingston, jr., however, was turned down because it "would constitute spot zoning."

Christmas Tree Robbed

Lyndhurst, N. J., Dec. 13 (AP).—Thieves stole all the lights from the municipal Christmas tree today—in front of police headquarter.

W. H. Carter, Veteran of 2 Wars, Dies

William Hale Carter, veteran of two wars and a Washington resident for 11 years, died Sunday in Soldiers' Home Hospital after a short illness.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. today in the home chapel. Burial will be in the cemetery there.

Mr. Carter, who was 70, was a native of New Jersey. He enlisted in the Army during the Spanish-American War and later served in the Philippine Constabulary as a lieutenant. He resigned after a year because of a gunshot wound.

During World War I, Mr. Carter served with the U. S. Cavalry and saw action in France. He held positions as a salesman on the West Coast after the war for a number of years. He came to Washington in 1938 and from 1942 until his death served as a civilian with the Washington District, Army Corps of Engineers.

Mr. Carter was active in veterans affairs and was regimental president of the Second New York Volunteer Regiment Association at the time of his death. He was a member of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Third United States Cavalry Regiment Veterans' Association, National Society Army of the Philippines and the Regular Veterans Association.

Mr. Carter lived at 220 Allison st. nw. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Roselle Ruckle Carter, and a sister, Mrs. Ruth Lindsay, Amsterdam, N. Y.

200 Churches Back Program Of Evangelism

At least 200 Greater Washington churches are expected to participate in an area-wide visitation evangelism program February 12 through 17.

Details of the program were revealed yesterday by members of the committee on evangelism of the Washington Federation of Churches, which is leading the effort. It is part of a 15-month united evangelistic advance among Portestant churches here.

Other events during the evangelistic advance, which will continue throughout 1950, include a comprehensive religious census of the city and a preaching mission.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary of the federation, termed Washington an "unusually good field" for an evangelistic eort, since 60 percent of its population is estimated to be unattached to any church. Nationally, as estimated 47 percent of the population is unattached to any church, he said.

The Rev. Dr. H. H. McConnell, field secretary of the department of evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, who will be in charge of the program here, urged ministers to prepare a list of prospects for visitation before the program begins.

Many of these names, he said, will be available after the religious census is completed. Additional prospects will come from church rolls.

Each church, he said, should pick the finest teams possible for the actual visitation. Workers, he said, should place stress upon getting decisions for Christ, rather than upon church membership alone.

Mrs. Mary Cody Connelly

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Cody Connelly, 84, will be held Thursday with a requiem mass at St. Peter's Church, Rome, N. Y. Mrs. Connelly died Monday at the home of her daughter, Mary M. Connelly, Veterans Administration lawyer, 1830 17th st. nw.

Born in Rome, Mrs. Connelly came to Washington more than 20 years ago. She was the widow of the late Bartholomew Connelly.

Survivors include two other daughters, Mrs. Victor H. Arnold, 1611 N. Taylor, Arlington, and Mrs. Fred W. Shipman, 6804 46th, Chevy Chase, and a sister, Mrs. Charles Waller, of Utica, N. Y.

Firemen to Honor Washington Today, Death Anniversary

Volunteer firemen of Maryland and Virginia will lay wreaths today at the tomb of George Washington at Mount Vernon.

In 1774, Washington presented a small, hand-operated fire engine to the Friendship Fire Co. of Alexandria. He was a member of the company. The engine was in use for 75 years and is now on view at the Washington Monument in Baltimore.

The ceremony, in commemoration of Washington's death 150 years ago today, will take place at 1 p. m.

The wreaths will be placed by Spencer J. H. Brown of Sandy Spring, Md., president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association, and Henry Lee Scott of Alexandria, president of the Virginia State Firemen's Association.

Former MP Held On Larceny Charge

John M. Havens, 20-year-old former Army MP, under-suspended sentence for five Arlington housebreakings, was held under $3000 bond yesterday for action of the county grand jury on charges of larceny and housebreaking.

Havens, who pleaded not guilty before Arlington County Court Justice Hugh Reid, has been charged with taking $60 worth of tools from Paul's Radio Co., 3147 N. Washington blvd., on November 20. He gave his address as 1403 N. Hudson st.

'Most Beloved'

City's Oldest Inhabitant Dead at 110

A 5-foot 75-pound woman, who at 110 was believed to be Washington's oldest inhabitant, is dead.

Funeral services were held yesterday for Mrs. Bessie Schwartzburg, who lived at the Hebrew Home for the Aged, 1125 Spring rd. nw. She died Monday night.

Mrs. Schwartzburg

Within her circle at the home, Mrs. Schwartzburg was one of the Capital's most beloved persons. She must also, for her age, have been one of its more remarkable ones:

She knitted sweaters for soldiers during World War II at age 107.

She never wore glasses in her life until three years ago.

At age 98 she recovered from a broken shoulder suffered in an automobile accident.

Up until four years ago she took a daily walk of up to eight blocks.

Mrs. Schwartzburg had a keen sense of humor, said her granddaughter, Mrs. Minnie Margulies, 3723 2d st. se., and "you had to keep on your toes to talk with her." She was also coy about her age. When she first became bedridden two years ago, her doctor asked her how old she was.

"What difference does it make?" Mrs. Schwartzburg came back. Finally she told him, "A hundred, more or less."

The age of 110 was "as close as we could come to figuring her age," Mrs. Margulies said. It could have been "a little more or a little less," she said.

Born in Poland, Mrs. Schwartzburg came to this country in 1918. She lived at the Hebrew Home for 16 years, after coming to Washington six years before that. A big moment in her life was when she was an honor guest at a Community Chest dinner in 1941.

Mrs. Schwartzburg was a deeply religious person and would read prayers to the other old people at the home whose eyesight was not as good as hers. In the old country her husband wrote by hand the sacred scrolls used in synagogues.

Mrs. Schwartzburg is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Sarah Tuckman, 303 Allison st. nw. Other survivors include a grandson, David Tuckman, 4816 New Hampshire ave. nw., and five great-grandchildren living in Washington.

Several of Mrs. Schwatzburg's relatives were exterminated during the Hitler regime, Maser said.

Ten chapters of the Psalms of David were read by Maser at the services at Goldberg's funeral home, 4217 9th st. nw. Burial was in George Washington Memorial Cemetery.

Berryman Rites Draw Notables

Clifford K. Berryman was buried in Glenwood Cemetery yesterday after services in the flower-filled Washington Heights Presbyterian Church which he had attended for 45 years.

Chief Justice Vinson, Associate Justices Reed, Burton and Clark, Federal and District Government officials, many of Berryman's colleagues of the press and just friends filled the church.

They heard the Rev. Robert E. Sherrill describe the Washington Star cartoonist who died Sunday as a "Christ-like" man, respected and honored, yet one who never watered down his own convictions.

Delegations were present to represent the National Press Club, the Columbia Historical Society and the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, as well as many individual members of the Gridiron Club and the Alfalfa Club, all of which claimed the cartoonist as an ardent member.

Tributes continued to arrive at the Berryman home, 2114 Bancroft pl., nw., for his widow, son and daughter, all expressive of the high regard in which the 80-year-old cartoonist was widely held.

Vice President Barkley said he was "deeply shocked and grieved over the death of my long-time friend." Senator George of Georgia called Berryman "one of the kindest men" he had ever known "with great wisdom and capacity for understanding."

Bernard Baruch said Berryman's cartoons "always showed keen insight and knowledge of human nature, touched always with kindness and consideration. He was a philosopher and draughtsman."

Other messages came from Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post; Librarian of Congress Luther Evans, William Randolph Hearst, jr., Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes and Brazilian Ambassador Mauricio Nabuco.

Meanwhile, two exhibits of Berryman cartoons are now on exhibit. Some 30 went on display yesterday at the Corcoran Gallery of Art and today 105 others are being exhibited at the Public Library's Central Branch, 8th and K sts. nw.

Elder French Of Adventists Is Dead at 66

Since his return to the United States he had been president of the East Pennsylvania and West Virginia Adventist conferences.

In Africa he was secretary of the southern African division headquarters of the church at Capetown and president of the Transvaal conference headquarters at Johannesburg.

Mr. Atkinson died at his home Monday night after a heart attack.

Christmas Gift Suggestion:

Give Yourself a New Figure for 1950

By Ida Jean Kain

Today's column is for those lucky women who are not more than 10 pounds over pleasingly plump. Picture yourself, five weeks from tomorrow, beautifully slim and at healthy normal weight. Check the calendar. Can you imagine a nicer self-present than being a whole size smaller?

And while it doesn't seem possible, all the folks who are 50 and more pourds above normal weight were once just 10 pounds past pleasing. They thought fleetingly of taking them off . . . even made half-hearted attempts. But their friends rallied round and discouraged them. "My dear you don't need to reduce." And a second friend chimed in with, "I always say a little extra weight makes a woman look younger."

So five years, many second helpings and fattening desserts later, the 10 pounds had turned into 25.

All this is not to encourage women to be too thin . . . heaven forbid! Ultra-streamlines do make women look older. But your healthiest and most flattering weight depends not on your age, but after age 25 weight should not advance with birthdays, but on your frame. With big, heavy bones your best weight is at the top of the scale for your height. You can carry more weight — your frame is built for it. But if you have small hands and feet and a small wrist, chances are you have a small-to-medium frame, and look and feel fine at fairly lean weight.

But back to those extra 10 pounds. You haven't the slightest notion of allowing them to grow . . . but take warning, the same food habits that added the 10 pounds can accumulate another 10. Stop taking that second hot buttered biscuit

It's easy to deal with 10 pounds . . . so deal with them, scientifically. At breakfast, have an egg (not fried) in place of the jelly. That is better nutrition. Have fruit in place of the piece of cake at lunch, but eat a good lunch. Then at dinner, put the science of nutrition to work again. Cut fats by taking a half pat of butter, cheerfully pass up 200 calories in the couple of tablespoons of gravy. Use a salad dressing made with half oil and half vinegar.

to Choose either bread or potatoes or rice, or any starchy food preferred, but have only one. And have a second vegetable plus the salad. For protein, take a generous serving of lean meat or fish, fat trimmed away. Five nights a week, choose fruit for dessert.

If you deal with those 10 extra pounds, you'll never have to face taking off 50.

Tobe' Says . . .

Time was, when the white kid glove was the sign of a great lady. Then, for many years, it disappeared from the fashion scene except for formal evening wear, and in official diplomatic circles.

It's back again now. The white kid glove crowd includes every woman who knows anything about smart fashions. They're wearing them chiefly in longer lengths of course—eight and ten buttons for daytime, sixteen and twenties with dinner and evening gowns. There are white kid shorties too—but it's the longer lengths that look the newest.

Of course most of the so-called white "kid" gloves arn't kid at all. The imported gloves still are, but our American gloves are nearly all beautifully tanned soft white capeskin.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Urbane Man Rejects Appeals of His Sister And His Wife, Both of Whom Exhort Against His Flirtation With Wife of Close Friend

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is about my brother, with whom I've always been very close. He is brilliant, well educated, well beloved, has a charming wife of fine family, and they have four children, the youngest in college. Their marriage has always been envied, but now I am afraid something beautiful is spoiled.

We've always had the same friends, amongst whom is Cleo, a very attractive woman whose husband is a close friend of Neil's. The two men have background and business in common and enjoy being together. Cleo is talented, clever, very feminine and fancies herself a femme fatale. For several years her charms have been focused on Neil at parties.

This is not her first flirtation, but she is being very persistent with Neil—and using the two men's friendship as a shield, she acts wide-eyed innocence if anyone tries to expose her hand. At first Neil's wife ignored the whole thing, but later she couldn't help seeing they were always together at parties and that old friends were being slighted as Neil began to narrow their social life down to foursomes with the other couple—just to talk business, he says.

Sister Fears Man May Lose His Wife

HERETOFORE our group had seen Cleo's good side and admired her husband and when she flirted we overlooked it. But everyone is beginning to talk about this, and I can hear my heart pound in the silence that falls when I enter a room. Cleo, like Neil, is skirting old friends—particularly me, because she knows I can see through her.

I've tried to talk to Neil. I said that Cleo is acting like a half-baked girl instead of a matron and mother in her forties. I told him we've seen her so friendly and cuddly with other men in the past, that the group had been lenient because of her husband, and that he (Neil) should have more pride and dignity. Also I said she lets everyone know their foursome plans, as a way of warding off other plans. He simply says I'm not being fair to Cleo, that she is harmless.

I've talked to Neil's wife, who came to me with tears in her eyes. She too feels that Neil resents any criticism, so she has been charming to Cleo and goes along with the plans, but I don't think she will much longer. Some day she will be gone, I fear; and if she leaves she will not return, I know. I love her so much, and my brother too, that I wish to help if possible. What can be done?

B. C.

Has Sister Always Championed Wife?

DEAR B. C.: One feels something wrong in this situation, quite apart from your brother's ill-concealed halfway surrender to Cleo's studied campaign of conquest. There is a shadowy suggestion of something fundamentally unsound in his marriage, as if his wife had never been more than a gracious nonentity and domestic figurehead in their "envied" alliance.

It is obvious that you feel personally affronted, injured or threatened by the encroaching degree of Cleo's success with Neil. But also it seems apparent that you would have been tolerant of her man-chasing in this instance—as in the past—if only she hadn't got between you and Neil; that is, if she had simply given his wife a hard time while continuing to include you in her inner circle, or shall we say in Neil's inner circle, which she controls now.

Sister Cannot Disperse Crisis

MRS. NEIL'S passive sufferance of Cleo's invasion thus far, when evaluated in the light of your fear that she may give Cleo the field any day and if she does she'll never come back, suggests that she has always (to your knowledge) carried a cross in relation to Neil—in the sense of being second fiddle to his family, or maybe especially his sister, due to the family's (or your) insistent "closeness" to him after marriage.

Weighing the gentle sister-in-law you've had against the deviously masterful Cleo, you probably begin to "love" and appreciate Mrs. Neil as never before, seeing how sweetly she always gave you undisputed access to your brother's presence and ear, I suppose; and seeing how Cleo has maneuvered you outside his confidence already. I surmise this is your first time to side emotionally with Mrs. Neil on anything.

Now, assuming Mrs. Neil hasn't the fight or finesse to yank the rug from under Cleo, I doubt there is anything you can do to dissolve the crisis. But if I were advising Mrs. Neil I'd certainly say she has full title to drop Cleo like a hot potato and adamantly refuse to cooperate in planned "foursomes" hereinafter—which might deal the triangle a body blow that would kill it off in time.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Every year we save a few of the Christmas cards that bring greetings from friends, relatives and acquaintances. Some of those with especially beautiful scenes find a place in the boxes where we save odds and ends.

The ones we like best, however, are those with a personal message and with something distinctive of the friends who have sent them. A family photo, a home-composed poem about what has been happening to them, or a linoleum-cut which one of the children in the family has made are among the things that appeal most.

Actually, it isn't so hard to make your own cards, and they're not nearly as expensive as are most commercially made greetings.

Shiny green Christmas trees with gilt and silver ornaments pasted on them, a few lines of a Christmas carol inked in with colored inks, some of those easily made "stick men" to represent the family members, are among the simpler greeting cards that can be worked out. And you can be sure that your friends will appreciate them more than a "swanky" store-bought greeting.

Orange frosting for a layer cake is easy to make: cream a three-ounce package of cream cheese well, and blend in the grated rind of an orange and a teaspoon of orange juice. Add about two cups of confectioners' sugar, beating well after each addition.

Add sliced dates to vanilla or chocolate pudding for a nutritious dessert.

Hint for Christmas Shoppers

Even Santa Claus Can't Make Better Jewelry!

By Peggy Preston

IT'S EASY! It's fun! And it is economical! What better formula can you find for a home-made Christmas gift?

We are referring to the art of jewelry making—a craft that can be surprisingly simple and fascinating. This week at a little downtown shop we watched a score of women discover how easy it is to design and make their own jewelry.

At first they refused to believe it. Then, catching on quickly, one woman gathered up a good supply of the necessary implements, carried them home to her 10-year-old daughter.

"This will keep her occupied until Christmas," the parent decided, then and there.

All that is required is a "finding" (ready-made base of an earring, pin or clip), a selection of stones, a tube of cement, a pair of tweezers and a toothpick.

Your stones may be of any color or size. They may be rhinestones, pearls, moonstones or one of the deep-hued stones, simulating rubies, emeralds or sapphires.

Here is the process. You must admit it is so simple a child could follow the directions.

Secure your findings to a flat surface such as cardboard or a strip of wood. With a tothpick apply transparent cement evenly all around the inside of the cup or stone setting.

For permanent setting pick up stone with tweezer and push firmly into each cup immediately after cement has been applied and before it has a chance to set.

When stones have been set in place allow about 15 minutes for hardening process before touching or moving. Then bend prongs over stone with tweezers.

Last step is to put your handiwork into an expensive-looking box, wrap it in gay Christmas paper, and send it to your best friend. She'll never suspect it did not come from a jewelry store.

You'll be surprised at the low cost of these items. Prices vary according to the type and number of stones you require, but a matched pin and earring set can cost as little as $1.65.

Local center for this thriving new hobby in The Button Shop.

EASY-TO-MAKE CHRISTMAS GIFT is this pin and earring set. Stones are inserted into the settings which have first been coated with cement. Items necessary for making jewelry pieces available at the Button Shop

Christmas Cookies . . .

IT'S IN THE TRIM!—The icing tricks that have been played with these Yuletide cookies make them most beguiling. Christmas trees and snow men are made with a simple icing—just confectioner's sugar mixed with cream—carefully applied. Tree decorations and the snow men's hats and buttons were made with gum drops and other small candies. The cookies are Honey Orange Crisps.

HONEY ORANGE CRISPS

1 egg
½ cup honey
1½ teaspoon ginger and cinnamon, mixed
2 tablespoons orange juice
1 tablespoon grated orange peel
3 cups sifted flour

Cream fat and sugar together until light. Beat egg and add with honey and spices. Mix in orange flavors. Add flour slowly, mixing to smooth dough. Chill, roll, and cut out with cutters. Bake on cooky sheet in moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit, for 8 to 10 minutes. This makes 8 to 9 dozen cookies. Trim with icing and decorate with cut gumdrops or other candies.

Tip for Wives

Mrs. Santa Probably Gets Black Undies

MAYBE it is the spirit of Christmas, but when a man attends a woman's fashion show he makes a piker out of his wife in the way of extravagance.

This is how the male animal reacted to a "Men's Night" fashion show of gift apparel, presented this week at Alans', a woman's specialty shop on Connecticut ave.

1. He bought the most extreme styles in lingerie, lounging robes and hostess gowns in the shop.

2. He showed a definite preference for black, both for his wife and daughter, regardless of age, size or shape. Blue and white were second and third choices.

3. Price was no object. Only the best for the little woman.

4. He was not interested in "little" presents, such as stockings, blouses, scarves, hankies, etc. He wanted something "fancy," such as his wife would not normally buy.

5. He knew exactly what he wanted, in both lingerie and dress clothes. What's more, he generally knew the right size.

Stayed Till the End

The boys had a fine time spending their money. About 200 had received invitations, and approximately that number turned up. They didn't leave till it was over, either.

They were a well-behaved bunch of lads, considering everything. According to the models, only one wolf put in an appearance, and he quieted down when he saw he was outclassed.

Food Society Eats a la London

An "Old London Dinner" was on the bill of fare for the winter meeting of the Washington Wine and Food Society last night at the Westchester.

The meal, served in the Holiday Room, began with baked oyster Piccadilly and roast prime ribs of beef with Yorkshire Pudding. Dessert was Bombe Victoria with macaroons.

About Nubian Oak Finish

K. S. E. of Silver Spring has called my attention to a simple method for obtaining the Nubian oak finish. This method is given in a Delta-Craft Publication called "Practical Finishing Methods." Here's the method according to the bulletin:

"Another method of frosting extensively practiced in finishing furniture is done with lacquer enamel. The bare wood is first coated with ivory, white, or grey green lacquer, applying the lacquer just heavy enough, to give a uniform ground color without filling the pores too much. The pores are then filled with a contrasting color of filler—white or gray aluminum or gray, white or ivory gray or ivory, etc. After the filler has been wiped off and allowed to dry, the work is given one or two coats of water-white lacquer or white shellac.

"White wax can be used instead of white filler if desired, in which case the final finish must also be wax.

"The lacquer process can be reversed if desired, filling first and then applying a very thin coat of colored lacquer, just heavy enough to color the wood while allowing the white filler to show through."

This booklet would make a most thoughtful and useful Christmas gift for the woodworker in your family. In addition to the detailed directions for all types of wood finish—and we really mean all—it gives a thorough discussion of selection and use of the materials and equipment needed in finishing.

There are sections on brushes—selection and care, spray finishing, preparing the surface, stains and staining, fillers and sealers, varnish, lacquer, waxes and wax finishes, rubbing and polishing, bleaching, furniture finishes, novel finishes, decorating, silk screen process, patching methods, metal finishing, walls and woodwork.

The appendix contains in table form solvents for finishing materials, covering capacities, drying time of most used finishing materials and number and sizes of abrasive paper.

Also, in the appendix are definitions for common and not so common finishing terms and materials. And last but really most important are given the finishing schedules for the common finishes in 1, 2, 3 order which would make them so easy to follow.

There are many illustrations throughout the booklet showing the exact way to do the work.

The booklet sells for only 50 cents and can be obtained by writing or going to the firm located at 734 10th st. nw.

I wish to thank K. S. E. for calling this most complete booklet to my attention.

Did any of our readers happen to clip this recipe?

My husband and I are being sent to Ankara, Turkey, on January 15 for one year by the United States Government. I would like some information about the living conditions there and if we will be able to rent a furnished apartment or not. I would also like to know or get some idea of the clothes to take along—bedding, dishes, silver, household linens, etc., also the cost of living, if possible. I am under the care of a doctor here and he says that it will be o. k. to go, but to find a doctor there right away. Are there any American doctors there? I understand there are about 800 Americans there now. C. B. L.

Would any of our readers who have recently lived in Ankara, Turkey, share their experiences with C. B. L.?

Bishop-Bracken

Here's a springtime version of the mothball decorative centerpiece which has been sent in by W. P. S. of Arlington:

Believe-It-Or-Not Bouquet

First, collect the makings. You will need a clear glass flower bowl, a handful of ordinary mothballs, a small quantity of citric acid crystals (about a dime's worth from the corner drug store), baking soda, a bit of green or blue vegetable coloring, and one or two flowers—a full-blown rose with a sprig of leaves is good. Now for the work: Cut the stem of the flower and its leaves very short. Anchor the flower to the bottom of the dry bowl, using a tiny needle-type flower holder or a bit of adhesive tape or modeling clay to hold it in place. If the container is a "bubble" bowl, with a narrow opening, the flowers may be weighted and lowered carefully into the bowl. Fill the bowl about two thirds full of water tinted a pale green or light blue with the vegetable coloring. Make sure that the flower is fastened securely so that it does not float when the water is poured into the bowl. Set the bowl on the table. Just before dinner is served, drop in citric acid and soda (about a tablespoon of each to each quart of water) and add the handful of mothballs. Suddenly the mothballs become sparking bubbles that dance up and down in slow rhythmic fashion in the tinted water, while the flower at the bottom of the bowl glistens like something out of fairyland. There is no odor from the mothballs, and they will usually keep up their lively performance throughout the dinner hour. Should they stop, just shake the bowl slightly or add another spoonful of citric acid and soda to start them in motion again. L. R. L.

In addition to W. P. S. of Arlington, we also wish to thank F. B. and C. S. D. of Washington, D. G. S. of Charlottesville, Va.; N. L. B. of Greenbelt, W. H. A. of Quantico, Va., and A. H. of Arlington, who have sent us directions for the mothball decoration.

Can't Blame Newton, Either, When a Brick Falls on Your Head—Rest Easy, Robert!

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

SCIENTISTS traditionally stick to their laboratories and avoid the simpler complications of the outside world. Notable exception is Dr. Harold Urey, the atomic scientist who received the 1934 Nobel Prize for his discovery for heavy water.

Dr. Urey, professor at the University of Chicago's Institute for Nuclear Studies, is an accomplished speaker and tonight, under the auspices of the Atlantic Union Committee, will speak at the Interior Department Auditorium on "Atlantic Union and the Atom."

Since the outbreak of World War II, he's plugged for the United World Federalist organization and after Hiroshima literally stumped the country trying to rouse interest in the establishment of an atomic authority control.

Having contributed so importantly to the discovery and perfection of the atom bomb, his attitude toward this Frankenstein creation is best illustrated by a story about the Ureys' 9-year-old son, Robert. Recently Robert was enrolled in a new school in Chicago. Another kid student, recognizing the name Urey, asked him if he was any relation to the man who invented the atom bomb? Robert admitted that it was his father but added defensively:

"Well, he did just a little bit on it. But you can't blame him for the whole thing!"

Dr. Urey, who's Hoosier-born but acquired his chemistry groundwork at both the Universities of Montana and California, was brought up as a member of the United Brethren Church—which explains a lot. And one of his three daughters goes to a Quaker college.

Incidentally, we've always been curious about what winners of the Nobel Award do with the handsome sum of prize money. Dr. Urey, at that time a professor at Columbia, used part of it to build a comfortable house in Leonia, N. J., and gave the remainder to his mother. Then Dr. Urey took over the Chicago job and had to leave his dream house. It was hard on him—and even harder on Mrs. Urey, who had become a leading civic light in Leonia.

Brazil Host Supreme Due Here

DIPLOMATS, economic experts, officials of all kinds who were present at the various conferences in Rio de Janeiro, plus other trippers with elegant letters of introduction who have traveled Brazilward, will be interested to learn that the Carlos Guinles are due to arrive here Friday.

The Guinles, who own a most magnificent property in Teresopolis, not far from Rio, rate as Brazil's No. 1 host and hostess. They've entertained President Roosevelt, Margaret Truman, Gen. George Marshall with almost unbelievable elegance.

Mr. Guinle, who has made much of his fortune in real estate, once owned an enchanting island called Brocoio, right in the middle of Rio's beautiful harbor. The island, equipped with swimming pools, play houses, heaven knows what wonderful equipment to make tropical leisure even more wonderful, was the show place of South America. But several years ago, Mr. Guinle parted with his treasure, which now belongs to the municipality.

Senhora Guinle, who is extremely musical, is the former Gilda Rocha, daughter of a leading Brazilian newspaperman.

A broadcast by Margaret on December 20 from Carnegie Hall will be listened to by her parents over the radio, and soon after that Miss Truman is expected home. Santa Lucia Visits Chancery

THINGS were stirring early yesterday at the Swedish Chancery. A group of celebrants gathered there at 9 a. m. for the yearly Santa Lucia party. Santa Lucia, who was originally an Italian saint, for some reason appears in Sweden on December 13, clad in white robes and wearing a crown of candles in her hair. It is very dark in Sweden at this time of year and the candles signify cheer.

At yesterday's fete Miss Margit Johansson, of the embassy staff, was Santa Lucia. The Ambassador and Mme. Boheman attended the celebration along with all the embassy staff members and their wives and children. After Christmas carols were sung, coffee was served with safrom buns and a special punch called glog, made of claret wine spiced with raisins, almonds, cloves, sugar and brandy, and served hot.

Santa Lucia was also honored by Miss Elisabeth Wikstrom-Angelin, daughter of the former Swedish Naval Attache and Mme. Angelin. Wearing a wreath of candles in her hair and carrying a tray of "Lucia" cookies, Miss Wikstrom impersonated the saint twice at the Beauvoir school where she teaches. Later she was hostess at a "Lucia" party which she gave at the home of Mrs. Constance Ackerson.

Maryland to Swear In Key Woman Executive

By Genevieve Reynolds

WHEN Miss Vivian Virginia Simpson is sworn in as Maryland's first woman Secretary of State on Thursday at 4 p. m., club leaders, politicos and colleagues will be on hand to cheer.

Engraved invitations to the ceremony have been issued to 1000 clubwomen in the Free State. But practically all the lawyers in Montgomery County will close up shop to attend the ceremony, which will be held in the historic State House at Annapolis. Montgomery County courts have declared a one-day holiday by assigning no cases for Thursday, according to Louis J. O'Donnell, assistant to the Governor. Among the men invited are members of the Montgomery County Bar Association of which Miss Simpson is president.

Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., who appointed the 46-year-old Rockville attorney to the post, will administer the oath of office. Following the ceremony, Governor and Mrs. Lane will give an official reception for more than 1000 guests at the Executive Mansion.

Petite Miss Simpson, who is 5 feet 1½ inches tall and weighs a mere 105 pounds, will succeed Bertram L. Boone of Baltimore in the $2000-a-year job. Boone has resigned to take a Federal position.

New Official Loves Clothes

THE attractive barrister has expressive, greenish-gray eyes and long, straight, brown hair. She loves clothes. For daytime she sticks strickly to tailored suits. She says that with her busy, active life, she has no time for in-between wardrobe items. With her, it's either a suit or a formal evening dress. So for her swearing-in ceremony Thursday, she will wear a black, two-piece wool suit and a fawn colored feathered hat.

Mrs. India Edwards of Prince Georges County, director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, and Mrs. John L. Whitehurst of Baltimore, Maryland's Democratic National Committee woman, are among the feminine political leaders expected to attend the ceremony.

Gardening and painting are Miss Simpson's principal hobbies. For the past two years she has been studying art with Andreazerega.

Miss Simpson will combine her new job as Secretary of State with private law practice. She and her brother, former State's Attorney Joseph B. Simpson, jr., are law partners. Both she and her brother have played prominent roles in Democratic political campaigns in the county and the State.

Opposes World Government Aid

REAR ADMIRAL REA FURLONG, USN (ret.), national commander, Military Order of World Wars, yesterday called upon members of the Washington Club to support congressional legislation which he believes would control communism and espionage.

At the same time he urged club members to oppose legislation providing for world government and Federal aid to education.

Specifically, Admiral Furlong suggested members write their Congressmen to pass the Mundt-Ferguson-Johnston bill (S. 2311). This bill, he said, calls for prohibition of known Communists in Government jobs, bars Communists from receiving United States passports and provides penalties for subversive activities. Also, he advocated support of the McCarran bill (S. 595), which lengthens the time limits within which people could be tried for past acts of espionage.

According to Admiral Furlong, passage of the Federal-aid-to-education bill would lead to central Government control of education "by left-wingers."

World government, he contended, would rob this country of its defense. Senators and Congressmen supporting the world government are "doing indirectly what the Communists have been trying to do for some years," he declared.

Bread Mother Used to Make Wins $50,000

By Sara Yokley

New York, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—A 32-year-old housewife, cooking for the first time on an electric stove and using one of her mother's recipes, today won $50,000 in a Nation-wide baking contest.

Mrs. Ralph E. Smafield of Detroit, Mich., who learned to cook when she got married six years ago, won out over 96 women and three men in a "bake-down" contest staged in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

She wouldn't reveal her prize-winning recipe, but described it as a "nut twist, made of yeast bread that rises in water and topped with peanuts and a sweet icing.

Miss Laura Rott of Naperville, Ill., took second prize of $10,000 and Mrs. Richard W. Sprague, San Marino, Calif., won the $4000 third prize. Six other women won prizes of $1000 each.

Two Washington women were among the group selected from throughout the Nation to compete in the final "take-down." They are Miss Elizabeth Lightcap, 3121 Buena Vista ter. se., and Mrs. George A. Baird, 3390 Stuyvesant in the final "bake-down." They won General Electric Stratoliner ranges and the trip to New York as guests of Pillsbury Mills.

Flying Director Saves on Sets

By Richard L. Coe

"AVIATION has changed Hollywood, too," says tall, Virginia-born Director Henry King. "Now the world's our stage."

King has just completed two pictures that prove the point: "Prince of Foxes" in Italy and "Twelve O'Clock High" in Georgia.

A flier in World War I and the director of such early hits as "The White Sister" and "Romola," King comes close to being the typical romantic hero of the air age. He's precise-moving, methodical, painstaking to a degree. No biographies print his age (you assume he's about 55) and you don't find him skulking about in people's gossip columns. He wears tweedy clothes, and with a glass in his hand seems to have stepped from one of those men-of-distinction eye-catchers.

"Transportation has changed the world," he goes on. "The cost of making 'Prince of Foxes' in Italy is infinitesimal when one thinks of the settings we had: Roman palazzos and gardens, the canals of Venice, the high, walled city which is the Republic of San Marino.

"We took a crew from Hollywood, picked up our actors, most of them, over there. We used funds frozen during the war. The Italian government didn't charge us for use of their historical buildings, but we donated the equivalent to local charities.

"As soon as our film was shot, we'd send it to Hollywood. We got back the finished rushes within a week. That's not bad time at all. I remember when we went over with Lillian Gish for 'The White Sister' 25 years ago. That took 13 days from New York. Why, for 'Prince of Foxes' we were working three days after leaving the Coast.

Those Rare B-17's

"Our problem for 'Twelve o'Clock High' was another one, and I'll bet you'd never have thought of it. That's a story about a bomber outfit of the Eighth Air Force in England during the war.

"So, we had to have B-17's. The Air Force was mighty helpful in getting these to us on a schedule we'd send in advance. Yes, we paid gas and upkeep expenses. The locale had to be in the South and it also had to look like England. Fortunately, from other flights I'd made in my own plane, I remembered one field in Georgia that didn't have palm trees and sand in evidence. We located that, settled down with a crew that came on from the Coast between breakfast and dinner, which, I might add, the charge for a DC-6 made cheaper than paying for the crew's equipment, fare and meals on the train."

By now, King's back in Hollywood after 19 full months devoted to three pictures—those two and one other, "The Gunfighter." But, via his own Waco, South America will see Director and Mrs. King come January. Those who know him won't be the least surprised if Twentieth Century-Fox doesn't have a yarn with a South American background up its sleeve.

KEITH'S plots a sneak preview tonight between the day's last showings of its new "They Live By Night."

FORD'S THEATER, Baltimore, has some new bookings: "Summer and Smoke" opens a week's run next Monday night, second in the Theater Guild—American Theater Society subscription season . . . The week of January 2, Margaret Webster's touring company in buses and trucks will take over with "The Taming of the Shrew" and "Julius Caesar" for the first full week stop on its itinerary . . . For two weks, beginning January 9, another Tennessee Williams drama, "A Streetcar Named Desire," with Uta Hagen and Anthony Quinn, heading the company which closes in New York this Saturday night . . . As yet, no plans for the Maryland.

THE K-B theaters will be having Christmas parties this Saturday at the Apex, Naylor, Senator and Atlas . . . Gifties for the little people, too.

MAURICE EVANS, busy man, just closed in Terence Rattigan's one-act drama, "The Browning Version" will play it Sunday night on the Theater Guild (WRC, 8:30) with all the members of the Coronet Theater cast . . . Here's one bet that had Rattigan written it as a full-length play, "The Browning Version" would have lasted the full season; as a radio play, though, it should be fine, because few cuts will be necessary . . . After that, Evans goes into high for the series of four plays he's producing for the New York City Center, with "She Stoops to Conquer" as the opener, December 28.

RADIO'S bubbling brother, TV, occupies a former Washington lady these days, Frances Starr . . . Miss Starr will be playing Marmy in "Little Women" on Friday night at 9 over WOIC on Channel 9 for the Ford Theater, with Meg Mundy, Kim Hunter, June Lockhart and Pat Kirkland as her daughters, under Marc Daniels' direction.

Talented Lead In Cyrano at College Park

"Cyrano de Bergerac" is currently being acted at the University of Maryland.

With two very fine plays so far, the 1949-50 drama season at the university promises to make it one of the outstanding groups in this area.

When Director John Coppinger chose Ken Calfee to fill the role of Cyrano, made famous by Coquelin and more recently by Walter Hampden and Jose Ferrer, he recognized an actor of talent. A dynamic stage presence, a highly cultivated voice and an inspiring amount of audience appeal more than compensate for his tendency to restrict his movements. He is particularly good in the garden scene with Roxane, and later in the battlefield episode. Inability to move quickly enough somewhat restricts his dueling scene in the first act, but it is nonetheless exciting.

Richard Lusher, playing the loveable booby Ragueneau, introduces a note of welcome broad comedy. The role demands a mobile face, sweeping gestures and a kind of grandiose slapstick humor which Mr. Lusher supplies with a vengeance.

Mr. Coppinger is working with a large cast on a small stage. Unfortunately, only a few of them recognize, or are capable of reproducing, the poetry of the lines or the intensity of the emotions. James Coyne is limited in the part of De Guich, the cruel sophisticate, until the end of the last act, at which time he creates a deeply moving and pitiful characterization.

More variety would improve Jean Hagerman's Roxane. Graceful, lovely and tender in many scenes, she lacks, however, the power to express a few of the more penetrating passions for which the role calls.

The university's stage is handsomely dressed with five different sets designed by Allen Bowers. Stylized, simple and unobtrusive, they fit in perfectly with the spirit of the play.

To those who have missed theater lately, I would suggest making an effort to see this production. A great play, excellent direction and several fine actors make it a worthwhile evening's entertainment in the University Theater on the College Park campus. The play will run through Saturday night.

ROBIN DORR.

Foreign Cab Check Asked

Protection of Prince Georges County taxicab operators from outside cabbies who pick up the cream of the night spot business illegally was asked yesterday.

Harry G. Mercer, county hack inspector, appeared before the County Commissioners at Upper Marlboro to urge appointment of an assistant inspector to check on such practices. Mercer said Washington and Montgomery County taxis cruise around the county from 11 p. m. to 6 a. m. and pick up the customers in violation of the county law.

Foreign cabs are permitted to deliver passengers from out of county, Mercer pointed out. The plea was taken under advisement.

County School Superintendent G. Gardner Shugart appeared to inform the commissioners that the school board now feels that the special session of the General Assembly will reenact the 50-million-dollar school loan act and solve the county school problem for the present.

Automobile license tag refunds were granted to incorporated towns as follows: Seat Pleasant, $857, and Capitol Heights, $888.

E. C. Smith appeared on behalf of his wife, Mrs. Ann Bowie Smith, to request a review of the $11,000 tax assessment increase imposed upon the Dower House which was left to Mrs. Bowie by the late Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, owner of the Washington Times-Herald, in her will. The Dower House assessment would be $93,000 if there is no revision.

Trams to Run South at Dupont

The first southbound streetcar is scheduled to traverse the Dupont Circle underpass today at 5:45 a. m.

Capital Transit Co. announced the operator will be H. B. Norford, who piloted the first northbound car through the underpass November 2.

Opening of the southbound tunnel means surface streetcar tracks now can be removed to prepare approaches to the vehicular traffic tunnel. District officials expect the whole project to be finished in March.

Murder Trial Of Holober Reset For January 9

The trial of Charles Francis Holober, 40, former Washington jewelry store clerk, on charges he murdered his wife and 8-month-old infant daughter, yesterday was postponed to January 9.

Judge Paul Brown of the Fairfax County Circuit Court, postponed the trial when he learned that Dr. Francis S. Chance, an official at the Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., was ill and would not be able to appear to testify for the State in the case.

Holober is accused of shooting his wife and burying his daughter Jean in a shallow grave near a Fairfax County nudist camp last February.

$45,000 Asked For Hospital In Alexandria

A grant of $45,000 to Alexandria Hospital by the city was strongly recommended yesterday by the city council committee on the hospital.

In a report to the council, the committee asserted that (1) the hospital is expected to lose $25,000 in 1949, (2) it is now more than 60 days past due in its accounts and (3) it is "living on a hand to mouth basis."

Explaining how it arrived at the $45,000 request, the committee pointed out that no action has been taken on its recommendation for a $35,000 grant in its initial report last May. This amount was to compensate the hospital for the city's share of medical indigent losses in past years.

The remaining $10,000, the committee said, should be paid early in 1950 to offset the institution's net loss this year. The hospital will apply $15,000 in endowment funds against the expected $25,000 deficiency.

The committee declared, "It is apparent that in the absence of more endowment income the city of Alexandria must make a grant to the hospital if it is to break even for the year."

Their Schools Are Superior, Negroes Told

Some Negro school buildings in Montgomery County are superior to some county white school structures, the county board of education declared yesterday.

The board in a letter to the Citizens Committee for Mutual Improvements undertook to reply to a complaint that it has failed to "equalize" Negro and white school facilities in the county.

The "high standard" being achieved in new Negro school buildings will not be equalled in all white schools for a "number of years," the board's letter, which was signed by Mrs. Durward V. Sandifer, president, stated.

The letter also pointed out that:

A program for consolidating Negro schools into a few modern buildings is now in progress with the first unit to be opened at Emory Grove at midterm; the new Negro high school at Rockville and a junior college are expected to be available next fall; the consolidated schools will have kindergartens, and provision for junior high students will be made when new buildings are completed.

The letter pointed out that Maryland law provides for separate systems and reminded the committee that the board has no control over selection of its members who are appointed by the Governor.

The citizens' committee communication was signed by Romeo W. Horad, president; John Chapman, secretary, and Walter E. Williams, Simon O. Smith and James D. Smith, members.

Europe Count, Penniless DP, Coming Here

Count Laszlo Paul Eszterhazy, whose family holdings are valued at eight million to 10 million dollars, arrived in the United States yesterday a penniless displaced person scheduled to become a farmer in Iowa.

The handsome Hungarian nobleman is expected to come to Washington in a few days to meet his stepmother, Countess Franciska Eszterhazy, who has been living in the United States and Cuba for 15 years.

The count is a first cousin of Duke Paul Eszterhazy, tried and convicted with Josef Cardinal Mindszenty a year ago on charges of plotting against the Hungarian government.

In 1944 the count was made a political prisoner by the Germans. After the war the Russians confiscated his huge estate, including 3600 horses, cognac plants and textile mills.

Arriving aboard the Army transport M. B. Stewart with 1260 other DPs, Eszterhazy told the Associated Press:

"I want to thank the American people and the American Government for giving me a country where I can be a free man and have a good future with a normal life."

Gum Springs Man Arrested For Murder

John Green of Gum Springs, Va., was charged yesterday with the murder of Archie Edwards, 321 Hopkins ct., Alexandria, on Sunday near Woodbridge, Va.

Green was nabbed by Washington police Monday morning, but was released after questioning. He had entered the Parker-Whelen Co., Inc., store at 827 14th st. nw. to purchase bullets with a companion carrying a gun in his belt.

Virginia State police arrested Green late Monday near his home at Gum Springs, which is located off Route 1 in Fairfax County. With him was Hugh W. Gibson, 51, also of Gum Springs, who was held as an accessory.

Green's companion in the Washington store, State police said, was Lee Robinson, jr., 609 North Henry st., Alexandria, who was also arrested yesterday as an accessory. The trio are held at the Prince William County jail in Manassas.

MORE POLISH than you'd expect in three performers is combined in Carl Ravazza, now doing a singing floor show at the Statler. He's backed up by Victor Lombardo and his 11-piece band, with Evalyn Tyner and her trio alternating—it's quite a combination!

Ravazza

Ravazza has a smooth tenor voice, with wonderful inflections and meaning to his songs. He's a real showman. His half hour effort in the spotlight has been worked over, polished and shaped to the customers' taste for many a rehearsal hour.

He sings his love songs as only a tenor can. Also there are humorous ditties, and stories set to music that are entertaining—chiefly for Ravazzo's clever use of words.

Bandleader Victor Lombardo, to my youthful taste, has considerably surpassed his brother, Guy, whose band he left 3½ years ago to try his own luck. In addition to playing sweet music almost exactly like his brother's, he breaks into swing arrangements, with hot trumpets and a good drummer. He provides classic background to hit tunes, and tricky rhythms and choruses for some of the catchy ones.

Although Victor has long since left his brothers and sisters in the old band, his heart is still with them. A bashful, friendly counterpart of Guy, his conversation is full of statistics and reasons for the greatness of Guy's Band—but nothing about himself.

ELLA FITZGERALD is at the Merryland this week, through Sunday. Known for such varied recordings as "Stone Cold Dead in the Market," "That's My Desire," and "Oh, Lady Be Good," she's one of the best in any sort of number. She's worked with many groups, such as the Delta Rhythm Boys and Louis Armstrong, but doesn't seem to take on their style—There's always her own special originality in her singing.

HOTEL 2400'S Lounge Riviera is sporting a complete renovation. The bar has been moved to the rear of the room, providing more table space in the immediate area of the bandstand, and an attractive cocktail lounge in the rear. Also added to enhance the beauty of the Lounge Riviera is attractive Jerry Schorn, new vocalist, with Bob Knight's Band.

Falls Church May Employ Teacher Aides

Three assistant teachers will be hired immediately for the Madison-Jefferson School in Falls Church to keep second graders from having to go to school on a half-day basis.

The announcement was made yesterday by school superintendent Irvin Schmitt. He said the new teachers will help regular instructors in the second grades in handling the class and keeping school records.

The half-day sessions were planned early this month when Schmitt declared the situation at the school was "getting critical." Second grade classes were averaging more than 40 pupils.

Classes will still have as many as 44 pupils, he said, but the clerical load will be reduced by the extra teachers to the point where they can be handled.

He pointed out that even if the second grades were shifted to a half-day basis some extra teachers would be necessary.

The proposed arrangement will also prevent half-day classes at the Oak Street Elementary School.

If Madison-Jefferson second graders had been placed on half-day shifts, it was planned to send pupils living in the Westlawn development to the Oak Street School—necessitating a double shift there.

Schmitt warned, however, that if second grade enrollment of students from Fairfax County increases at Madison-Jefferson, the city and county will have to work out some "cooperative agreement" whereby county youngsters can be taken care of in other county schools.

Queen of Swedish Festival, 3 Maids Killed in Wreck

Stockholm, Dec. 13 (U.P.)—Else Hallberg, a local "Lucia Queen," and three of her maids were killed tonight and a fourth maid and a chauffeur seriously injured when the car in which they were riding was struck by a train.

The girls, all between 17 and 20, were en route to a party for dairy workers. They were chosen for their beauty to reign during Sweden's centuries-old "Festivals of Light," heralding the approach of Christmas.

This year an American girl was chosen from among girls of Swedish ancestry to represent the United States at the festival. The American Lucia Queen was Norma Freeman, 20, Chicago, Ill. She and her American maids are now in Sweden.

New Zealand Installs New Government

Sydney, Australia (Wednesday), Dec. 14 (AP).—New Zealand made the formal changeover yesterday from a Socialist to a Free Enterprise government. Australia is to make her similar shift Monday.

Labor regimes had been voted out in both the British Commonwealth nations in the last two weeks.

New Zealand's new National Party government of Prime Minister Sidney G. Holland was sworn in at Wellington, the capital. Winning 46 of the 80 House seats in a parliamentary election November 30, it ended 14 years of Labor rule. Prime Minister Peter Fraser's Labor cabinet resigned last week, but had remained on in a caretaker capacity.

"There's not going to be any more socialism in New Zealand—the peg (stopper) went in this afternoon," said Holland when asked if the government would continue to buy up privately-owned coal mines.

Australia's Prime Minister, Joseph B. Chifley, tendered his Labor cabinet's resignation yesterday. A cabinet of the victorious Liberal-Country Party coalition, led by Liberal Robert G. Menzies, will be sworn in Monday.

Counting of votes in Australia is still incomplete, but it looks as if the new House of Representatives will give the coalition 75 seats to 46 for Labor, a majority of 29.

Trolleys to Run Southbound in Tunnel Today

With nary a trumpet blast nor roll of drum, the Capital Transit Co. is going to open the southbound tunnel at Dupont Circle to trolleys today.

E. C. Giddings, company vice president, said the first street car will go through the southbound side of the tunnel at 5:45 a. m. today. Operator of the car is to be H. B. Norford, Giddings said, who also guided the first streetcar through the northbound side of the tunnel.

Arlington Site Set For Relay Station

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. last night received permission from the Arlington Zoning Board to build a micro-wave radio relay station in the 5300 block of Lee hwy.

Harold M. Botkin, the company's division plant superintendent, said the station is one of the early links in a long-range Bell System plan to use radio instead of wire transmission.

Scheduled to be finished next summer, the new station will be used at first for shortwave transmission of television shows from New York. The four channels operating currently in Washington get their network shows via coaxial cable.

Current plans for the new relay station will permit transmission of one television program in each direction, between Washington and New York. Whether radio transmission will bring any improvement in television reception is still uncertain, Botkin said.

Eventually, the official stated, the micro-wave transmission will be used for long distance telephone calls and other communications services.

The new station will be built on a 4½-acre tract with a 230-foot tower.

The zoning board acted on the recommendation of the Arlington Planning Commission at the meeting in Arlington Circuit Court house.

Following other Planning Commission recommendations, the board also:

1. Rezoned property on the north side of the 3300 to 3500 blocks of Fairfax dr. from local commercial and apartments to general commercial;

2. Rezoned property at 1018 N. Stuart st. from one family residential to general commercial;

3. Granted use permits to Bertram J. Greenhouse to operate a gas station at 46 S. Glebe rd.; to and Ethel M. Fistere to operate an Arthur Murray dance studio at 2531 Wilson blvd.

4. Renewed use permits for the Lee Gardens Cooperative Nursery at 701 N. Wayne st.; and for Mrs. Alice Houghton to operate a 24-hour boarding house for four children at 1021 N. Highland st.

Intimacies Told

'Party Girls' Face Charge Of Extortion

Los Angeles, Dec. 13 (U.P.).—Ben Klekner, middle-aged head of a Hollywood talent school, testified today he met Helen Keller, accused of working an extortion plot against him, when he tried to line up party girls to entertain salesmen.

Miss Keller and her former roommate, Toni Hughes, both 26, are being tried on charges of extorting money from Klekner on threats he would be taken for a ride by mobster Mickey Cohen's aides. Cohen denied he was a party to the alleged plot.

Klekner said he contacted Miss Keller to arrange for her and a friend to entertain some visiting salesmen but the party fell through.

Instead, he said, he contacted Miss Keller himself several weeks later and they went to a motel where they were intimate. He said he gave her $15.

"I saw her several times afterwards until March of 1947, when I suffered a heart attack and was laid up for five months," Klekner testified. "After I went back to work I saw her 8 or 10 times more."

Klekner said when he "saw" Miss Keller he meant they were intimate and each time he gave her money.

Defense Attorney Glenn Lane said he would show Klekner won Miss Keller's love with promises to marry her and then "brushed her off."

The State contends the two girls made a recording of an intimate moment in Klekner's romance with Miss Keller and threatened to expose him to his wife unless he paid them $10,000.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Dr. Kinsey told a group of New York psychoanalysts that in interviewing women for his forthcoming book he learned that a man's figure basically is not the determining factor in making him attractive to a woman. This will startle the gym enthusiasists and movie producers and may alter their concept of the American ideal.

Danny Kaye visited the home of John Mason Brown, the drama critic, who said that Kaye's performance in "Lady In the Dark" had been among the most memorable he ever had seen. "Then why didn't you say so in your review, at the time?" asked Kaye. The critic insisted that he had said so. They made a bet about it, and while a stakeholder held the bet, Brown went to his files and found his "Lady In the Dark" review. His only reference to Kaye had been: "Also in the cast were MacDonald Carey, Victor Mature and Danny Kaye."

Monday, on the eve of his first dress rehearsal in G. B. Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," Sir Cedric Hardwicke sat in the Algonquin, lamenting his sudden hoarseness. His companion suggested that this should have happened in some of Hardwicke's movies—for no script is good enough to deserve having every word heard clearly . . . "Yes," Hardwicke whispered. "Inaudibility is the theater's advantage over the cinema—except in a play by Shaw."

Albertine R. Wheelan, who was David Belasco's designer, is 84 and the oldest member of the Woman Pays Club. Last week, in celebration of her newest work—a book-plate she designed—the club gave her a party. She acknowledged by making a speech, in which she read from a leaflet about Belasco. She faltered in the middle of the reading, and peered at the leaflet. "I think," sighed the 84-year-old lady, "I'll have to get glasses."

During his brief stay here, Sir Laurence Olivier mentioned his service in the Fleet Arm of the British Navy. "Did you ever get to meet your admiral?" he was asked . . . "Yes," said Olivier, "I once had lunch at his mess" . . . "What did he say to you?" the star was asked . . . "He said," Olivier reported, "'I say, give the marmalade a fair wind, Olivia.'"

George Woods, the theatrical agent, supped with some friends at Lindy's, and a man they once had known approached the table and asked them to cash his check for $12,000. They quickly realized that he was in need of psychiatric aid, particularly when he began to speak incoherently . . . "We'll take you to the night bank, where you'll get the $12,000 check cashed," they told him, and then took him to Bellevue's Psychopathic Ward. They waited, and soon the unfortunate patient was wheeled by his arms encased in a strait jacket. "Looka what a guy's gotta go through," he smiled at them, "just to cash a check."

Doll Aids in Rescue Of Child From Pipe

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 13 (AP).—A 2-year-old girl fel into a furnace cold air duct in her home today and became panic stricken, but quieted down after her mother dropped a doll to her.

Sandra Joyce, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Harold K. Joyce, played with the doll while a section of the pipe was cut away in the basement. The child was rescued an hour later without injury.

The Secret of Personal Power

'And What the Mind Believes, It Eventually Does'

By David Guy Powers

Instructor of Instructors at the Dale Carnegie Institute

Chapter Four

PROF. ORMOND DRAKE, assistant dean of the college of liberal arts, New York University, once startled a convention of professors with this challenge:

"If all the books on the art of moving human beings to action were condensed to a brief statement, what would that statement be?"

The discussion lasted two hours, and was followed by a special session of 15 leading university and college professors. They met far into the night.

Probably there never was such a distinguished group attacking this problem. They had read almost every book written on the subject in any language. Collectively they had spent more than 200 years teaching in the classrooms of our country.

This is the statement they agreed held the secret:

"What the mind attends to, it considers: what it does not attend to, it dismisses. What the mind attends to continually, it believes. And what the mind believes it eventually does!"

Let's reduce these generalities to simple procedures. Get a man thinking about your idea. Even if he rejects it, keep him thinking about it.

Gradually he will become accustomed to it. Now if you persist long enough, he will believe it. And here is the payoff. Once he believes it, he will act upon it.

Tell 'Em Often

REPETITION is reputation!" said Arthur Brisbane. Even the rankest myths assume the dignity of historic truth when repeated endlessly.

The gullible swallow an oft-told tale as Gospel, and the skeptical swallow it because they cannot disprove it.

All those in between believe it because it is pleasanter to share a common ignorance than to be wise alone.

George Bernard Shaw gave himself as an example of this principle of repetition when he said almost 50 years ago.

"For 10 years past, with an unprecedented pertinacity and obstination, I have been dinning into the public head that I am an extraordinarily witty, brilliant, and clever man.

"That is now part of the public opinion of England, and no power on earth will ever change it. I may doder and dote; I may potboil and platitudinize; but my reputation shall not suffer; it is built up fast and solid, like Shakespeare's, on an impregnable basis of dogmatic reiteration."

And on his ninetieth birthday every paper in the land called Shaw "an extraordinarily witty, brilliant, and clever man."

John Dewey, America's most distinguished philosopher, wrote to me: "I am inclined to believe that such influence as I have exercised in teaching and writing is more due to mass material and repetitive effect than anything else."

Take Macy's

SO IF you would sell an idea, repeat it, repeat it, and when you get tired repeating it—repeat it again.

Now, repetition need not be direct. The most skillful persuasion is indirect. Set the situation and let the person persuade himself.

Take the example of Macy's in New York. They have a technique called the "unadvertised special."

You have to come into the store to find out what it is. As you enter you are handed a bill which lists the 20 or more items on sale that day.

These bargains are sold below list price. You'll find that one item is on the third floor, one on the sixth, and another in the basement. It takes about 67 minutes to visit the counters involved.

What is Macy doing? "Buying" the time of the woman who came in for a bargain.

She is giving her attention to all objects on display as she goes from counter to counter. She sees things she needs, she visualizes the "good" the possession of these objects will bring her.

And by the indirection of the implanted motives, she is being persuaded to buy. No one is saying a word to her; she is persuading herself.

Is it effective? Macy sells 160 million dollars worth of goods a year. And the secret again is: Create the conditions of persuasion and the person will proceed to act.

WHEN Dr. John W. Studebaker conducted a survey of the Philippine Islands he came back with one of the simplest, but most far-reaching, recommendations on record.

He said, "Put a Sears Roebuck catalogue in every home in the Philippines. That will raise the culture level of the islands."

Why? Because no man desires that which he does not know. No man can dream of things which are totally outside his experience.

Nancy Astor suggests the same treatment of the Russians.

"The way to make Russia a part of the world," she said, "would be to put a 5-and-1-cent store in every town over there."

If you would sell your ideas, do this:

1. Know your idea and its appeal.

2. Use the eye, the ear, the touch, the smell, and the situation as means of repeating your idea.

3. Repeat endlessly.

Work on Fastest Liner On Schedule in Virginia

Newport News, Va., Dec. 13 (AP) Work on the 70-million-dollar United States Lines superliner under construction at the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., is proceeding on schedule, a spokesman for the shipyard indicated today.

The ship, the SS United States, will be the fastest luxury liner in the world and the largest ever built in this country. It is scheduled to be delivered to United States Lines in the late spring of 1952.

I Travel in Dreams

I like to travel now and then . . . And see the world unfold . . . But I prefer to move among . . . The memories I hold . . . And I prefer the perfect things . . . That I have never found . . . Of color and of majesty . . . And beauty all around . . . In other words, I like to dream . . . And happily pretend . . . That every time I say hello . . . I make another friend . . . That every street is paved with gold . . . And every hand is warm . . . And there is no catastrophe . . . Or ever any storm . . . I like to travel to the moon . . . And to the stars that gleam . . . But only in the fantasy . . . That forms another dream.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Doesn't Uncle Sam Read Those Tax Returns We Send In?

There was a great howl of protest when the Census Bureau let it be known that it proposes to ask citizens about their incomes in the 1950 nose counting.

Personally, I wouldn't object to such a question. If anybody asks how much I make, I'll reply:

"About a hundred dollars a year less than I spend, and if you can explain how I manage it, I'll be greatly obliged to you."

LAST WORD

Now I know why Father always counseled that it doesn't pay to try to argue with a woman. Mrs. Hugh G. Flynn of Purcellville, Va., writes:

"You're always crabbing about not having room for long items. If you'd leave out some of those silly short ones you'd have plenty of room for long ones."

PET PEEVE

Water M. Norris of 1418 Somerset pl. nw. sighs that the fellow he could get along without very nicely is the big guy who plants himself in the middle of the bus aisle, unfolds his newspaper, and refuses to budge an inch in any direction.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

You asked for complaints about your paper's circulation department. Well, here's a first class gripe.

Beginning about October 1, we tried and tried to place a subscription for home delivery. I made about six telephone calls, backed up by personal visits to your paper. Nothing happened.

Then one day the paper boy on this route stopped by to ask if we wouldn't like to subscribe, and we told him we sure would. Thereafter, he took good care of us until he turned the route over to his successor.

Currently, we want two copies of The Washington Post delivered to us each day except Sunday, when we need only one.

But another half-dozen phone calls and personal visits have failed to produce any results. We just don't seem to be able to convince anybody that we really want two copies of the paper, except on Sunday. Can you help?

Mrs. William P. Jones
4733 1st st. sw.

Dear Mrs. Jones:

You'll have your two copies, Monday through Saturday, and a single copy of the Sunday paper, if I have to bring them out myself. And I'm sure that won't be necessary.

We're bound to make a couple of mistakes in delivering so many thousands of papers each day, and the only way we can correct those mistakes is to be told about them.

Incidentally, you've given me a wonderful idea in that request for two copies of the paper. I'm going to order two copies, too. For a few cents a week I'll be able to read my paper en route to work, without throwing the remainder of the family into a tizzy.

YEAH, HOW COME?

M/Sergt. Fred Presnell of South Post, Fort Myer, Va., writes:

"It is the universal custom to display the United States Flag only from sunrise to sunset on buildings and stationary flagstaffs in the open.

"But on at least four recent occasions I have seen the Flag flying as late as 10 p. m. at the entrance to the Shirlington business center. I wonder why."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four truly beautiful, remarkably well-behaved kittens." (Atlantic 5411.)

"Anybody want Spooks? She was born on Halloween, and has good cat manners. Will deliver in Virginia." (Alexandria 3146.)

"Four attractive kittens, 6 weeks old." (Republic 4142, extension 2838, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.)

"Three housebroken kittens; just cats, but cute." (Ordway 4273.)

"Six-month-old gray kitten." (Falls Church 7854.)

A reader asks: "How do you know that the laboratories are not getting these cats and dogs for their nefarious and useless experiments?"

The answer is that I don't know who gets these animals. That's the owner's business, not mine. Donors get dozens of calls, and have ample opportunity to select applicants who appear likely to give the pets good homes.

Justice Dept. Eyes Maragon Case

By Drew Pearson

A significant development has just taken place inside the Justice Department regarding the amazing John Maragon, close friend of General Vaughan and once a frequent caller at the White House.

Pearson

Higher-ups in Justice have given orders to George Morris Fay, efficient United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, to give them a full report on the perjury case against Maragon and to make no move without consulting the Justice Department.

This has not been done in other important cases. Gen. Benny Meyers also faced a perjury charge, but no such order went to Fay from the Justice Department. He was convicted and jailed without any delay or consultation.

John Maragon not only faces a perjury charge, but Senator Clyde Hoey of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Expenditures Subcommittee, officially sent the case to the Justice Department with a request for prosecution. Futhermore, Hoey went to extra precautions to have a quorum of his subcommittee present when Maragon was questioned so there would be no legal loophole for a wriggling out of a perjury prosecution.

Finally, it has been three full months since the Senate sent its report to the Justice Department, and still no action. Ordinarily, it takes about one week to bring a case of this kind before a grand jury.

Wary of Big Boys

Failure to act in the Maragon case brings up a point regarding the Justice Department which most people don't realize. The public generally thinks of the Justice Department as the protective branch of the United States Government which reaches out to punish dishonesty wherever found and does its best to keep the Federal Government clean.

A review of important cases, however, indicates that the Justice Department is extremely reluctant to go after the big boys in Government, and that most of the cleanup cases have been developed either by committees of Congress or by the newspapers. Frequently it isn't until after a crime has been thoroughly aired by the press and on Capitol Hill that the so-called upholders of the law in the Justice Department move in. And if some friend or high political figure is involved, such as John Maragon, sometimes they don't move at all.

Here are a few notable cases in point:

Alger Hiss — Now on trial for perjury. This case was developed by the House Un-American Activities Committee, which turned up the famed pumpkin papers. Since the Justice Department finally moved in, however, its lawyers have done an efficient and persistent job.

Congressman Andrew May of Kentucky — Now sentenced to jail. Various hints of May's peculiar activities were published by this column and others for some years, but it took the Senate investigating committee, under Senator Jim Mead of New York, to bring out the facts. After that the Justice Department acted.

Congressman Parnell Thomas—Now sentenced to jail. It took a newspaperman to dig out Thomas' skulduggery. After the canceled checks in Thomas' kickback deals, plus an important witness, were turned over to the Justice Department, it carried through thoroughly and efficiently. However, Alex Campbell, dynamic chief of the Criminal Division, who carried the ball, had to buck some opposition near the top.

Gen. Benny Meyers—The first public revelation that General Meyers had been up to no good was published in this column on July 29, 1947, when it was stated that Meyers had speculated in the stock market with as much as four million dollars. Chief credit belongs to the Brewster Committee, however, for bringing out the facts in the Meyers case and turning them over to the Justice Department.

Arabian Oil — It was also the Brewster Committee which developed the amazing manner in which certain admirals and the Navy had overcharged the United States Government for Arabian Oil during the war. The Justice Department, for reasons best known to itself, never prosecuted this scandal, but exposure of the facts resulted in new oil contracts and a saving to the taxpayers of millions of dollars.

Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma—When a grand jury probing lobbyists learned about the speculating activities of Senator Thomas, the Justice Department, opposed an indictment. Thomas' friends, who worked with him in speculating—Ralph Moore, Tom Linder, J. E. MacDonald, and Robert Harriss — were indicted. He was not.

On the other hand, the Justice Department's criminal division and the FBI did an excellent job of tracking down and prosecuting various treason cases—notably Axis Sally, Tokyo Rose, Herbert Burgman, together with the Judith Coplon documents case. But in none of these were any high-up Democrats or high-up Republicans involved.
